

The My Lai Conviction—Local Opinions Vary

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON
Maybe Marie Gorsline of Kingston said it best when asked her opinion of the conviction of Lt. Calley. "It's just my opinion, your opinion, anybody else's opinion. I think the Man upstairs knows and that's that."

There were all kinds of opinions, with very few people agreeing, in a series of interviews taken by The Freeman on Central Broadway, in Uptown Kingston and in Woodstock.

Even veterans of Vietnam combat disagreed. Said one young man on Broadway, "He went in with 40 men and came back with only 15. I can understand why the guy flipped out. I probably would have done the same thing."

And the other young man said, "The guy deserves what he's getting. He committed atrocities during combat. I've been through it and I know what it is. He didn't have any reason to do that. . . . friendly people coming out of the village. . . . he doesn't have to shoot everybody. He deserves everything he gets."

Asked about the death penalty, the man said, "He shouldn't get the death penalty, though. No one should get the death penalty."

A third man standing with the two Vietnam veterans said, "As far as I'm concerned the man was sent there to do a job and he did it but as far as the women and children are concerned I don't go for that."

"He got just what he deserved," Mike Cahill of Kingston said. Another older man, also interviewed on Broadway, disagreed with Cahill. "The fella was only doing his job. This thing has been made too much of. The guy was only following orders."

Robert Gillen, like several other persons interviewed, felt Calley was a victim of the military. "They covered this thing up for two years," Gillen said. "There were plenty of other people involved. If they were going to hang Calley and he was the only one, they would have done it right after it happened."

Special

The opinion of Calley as a victim of the military, was also vented uptown. "I think he was made a scapegoat. The chain of command in the Army apparently wants to hang him for their inadequacies," one man said. "The man was asked to defend his country. He did what he thought was right at the time. He based his position on the fact that you never know which one is enemy and which one is friend. I don't know if I'd have acted any different in his place."

"I think it was fair, a fair trial," a Port Ewen man told The Freeman. "I think it was just like the Germans at Nuremberg. I think they got a fair trial here." The death penalty? "I think that's carrying it to an extreme."

Two elderly men were interviewed. "I think the Army's at fault," one said. "You know what I mean, the higher ups. I wouldn't approve of the death penalty. I'd give him life. The guy's gone through enough now."

"I wouldn't even give him life," the other man said. "He's just a guinea pig. That's what I think."

William Slover, interviewed on Hasbrouck Avenue, said, "I feel there's a lot of other people involved. Not just a single individual. I feel it's going to ruin the entire morale of the Army itself."

Slover's views were echoed in Woodstock by a Vietnam veteran who said, "What's the sense of sending guys over there? You're sent there to fight but now you don't dare shoot anyone. . . . you might get court

A woman, sitting in the sun on the village green, said, "I don't read about the war anymore. It's disgusting." As far as the death penalty in the Calley case, she agreed with most of the people interviewed. "I don't believe in the death penalty for anyone."

One young Woodstocker felt there was a connection between the Calley case and the Manson case. "It was no coincidence," he said. "It's a conspiracy. Manson couldn't get a fair trial and neither could Calley."

"I don't think anyone really knows what happened in the Calley case," Mrs. Gorsline said.

MASS INDIGNATION — The entire five-man draft board for Clark County, Georgia resigned over the conviction of Lt. William Calley. The Athens board said they did so as a protest over the Calley conviction. Chairman George Pugh — a World War II veteran — said, "Our consciences could not continue to allow young men in the armed forces who confront the enemy with their hands behind them. Members (L to R) are: John Neely, Daniel B. Amaker, Chairman Pugh, Roscoe Hansford, and William F. Condon. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

6 Who Convicted Calley Deciding On the Sentence

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who says he never wanted to kill a human being in his entire 27 years, will shortly learn whether the jury that convicted him in the My Lai massacre demands his death to balance the scales of military justice.

The six veterans of battle in Vietnam, Korea, and World War II who found Calley guilty of premeditated murder of 22 Vietnamese on Monday took up the new burden of deciding his fate late Tuesday. They deliberated an hour and 37 minutes before recessing until today.

Charging them that life imprisonment was the lightest sentence they could bring and death the maximum, the judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy, told the jury of officers:

"You alone are responsible for determining an appropriate sentence. You should select a sentence that is appropriate to the offenses of which you have convicted Lt. Calley, his needs, the welfare of society, and good order and discipline within the military service."

The jury has given evidence it is acutely aware of the responsibility it carries. It took 13 days to convict the stubby former platoon leader of deliberately forming a design to slaughter shrieking women, children, and old men in the hamlet three years ago.

In an emotional two minutes and 12 seconds Tuesday, the 5-foot-3 Miamian spoke his last words to the men who will punish him: "Yesterday, you stripped me of all my honor. Please, by your actions that you take here today, don't strip future. . . (his voice broke in a sob) . . . future soldiers of their honor, I beg of you."

"The facts, gentlemen," replied the driving young prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel. "The United States government did not create the facts. What he did made the facts."

"You did not strip him of his honor. What he did stripped him of his honor."

"Your courage will continue to be tested. The government says to you: Take those facts, gentlemen. You must arrive at a sentence commensurate with your findings (verdict), which must show the principle involved: It is not honor and it never has been considered honor to kill unarmed men, women, and children."

By speaking to the jury just before it retired to deliberate, Calley waived the right to speak up just before it delivers its sentence. Choking back sobs and heavy breathing that interrupted his extemporaneous statement several times, the rusty-haired, tilt-nosed defendant provided the most moving moment of the trial.

A former company commander and a comrade in arms of Lt. William Calley comes to his defense, saying the life or death sentence was not proper. Story Page 7.

Prior to his words, his 70-year-old, soft-spoken attorney, George W. Latimer, pleaded for Calley's life: "There is a place for Lt. Calley to go on and make something of his life, but he can't do it from a graveyard. . . . I go away with a heavy heart, for I see a life ruined."

Latimer was misty-eyed when he finished a speech in which he said, "There is no other reason in the world that this boy killed except that he thought the United States Army to get the war over needed to kill; if that warrants the death penalty, then I've lost my sense of perspective. . . ."

"You don't have to have eyes of glass and hearts of stone. Somewhere along the line a few humanities ought to be worked into this thing where maximum is not given. . . . who taught him to kill. . . . kill. . . . kill? If you indoctrinate men, that's the way they act."

GOP Leaders Racing Clock On $7.7 Billion Compromise

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Facing a midnight deadline, Republican legislative leaders hoped for a vote late today on a compromise $7.7 billion budget plan that called for $488 million in increased taxes.

Although the latest budget plan reduced the need for higher taxes by more than $100 million, Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea was reportedly under pressure from a number of his members for still deeper cuts. Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges was said to have fewer problems with hold-outs.

Duryea, Brydges and rank and file Republicans in each house planned final closed door conferences as part of the budget showdown. If a vote comes at all before the start of the new fiscal year one minute after midnight, it will likely come in the evening or at night.

Part of the problem was worked out when GOP leaders agreed, reluctantly, to deeper welfare cuts, an additional $5 million slice out of Governor Rockefeller's $18 million cultural aid program, and restoration of some of the funds cut from revenue sharing.

"If we can get the Republican party unified on this, we can have it by midnight," Rockefeller said. "We know we aren't going to get any help from the Democrats."

Democrats have already voted to unanimously oppose the Republican plan. This gives Duryea a margin of only three votes in the Assembly and Brydges two in the Senate.

After yielding to demands for more state aid for cities and a deeper cut in taxes, Republicans offered a spending plan calling for:

— A penny on a dollar hike in the sales tax to raise $320 million.

— Increases of $109 million in the business tax. The corporate franchise taxes and bank taxes would be increased one per cent.

— Increasing the 4½ cent a gallon beer tax to 20 cents. This would raise $44 million. The hike amounts to about two cents a bottle.

— Increases of $15 million in liquor taxes.

This plan eliminates Rockefeller's original proposals for a 10 per cent surcharge on the income tax, higher automobile registrations and other license fees, and increased levies on gas and cigarettes.

The plan cuts the governor's budget more than $700 million. Welfare would be one of the biggest cuts — about $170 million. Welfare benefits in the downstate area would be chopped about 10 per cent to the already lower upstate level. Medicaid eligibility would be reduced statewide.

Under pressure from the state's "Big Six" mayors, the legislature agreed to restore about a third of the planned $121 million cut in the state's revenue sharing plan. This restoration was made at the expense of deeper welfare cuts.

Republicans also planned a number of other fiscal moves to balance the budget. Proposals included tapping the state's rainy day fund to pay for shortages in the current fiscal year, collecting some loans the state has made at an earlier date, and anticipating some form of additional aid from the federal government.

Rockefeller has stated the state will end the current fiscal year about $200 million in the hole. This will have to be paid in part out of next year's budget, since the rainy day fund has about only $150 million in reserve.

The state's "Big Six" mayors won a $30 million concession from Governor Rockefeller and the legislature Tuesday, but insisted that city employees could be laid off and schools closed early this year if $90 million more in proposed budget cuts are carried out.

"If I seem upset, it's because I am," Buffalo Mayor Frank A. Sedita told a news conference.

"The state is breaking its promise to us," he said. "We're counting on this money. If we don't get it, we'll either have to call in city employees and ask them to take pay cuts, or else get out the hatchet and cut away jobs."

After a two-hour meeting with Rockefeller and Senate GOP Leader Earl W. Brydges, the mayors announced that a revised plan to cut sharing of the state income tax from 21 to 18 per cent, instead of 17 per cent, was not enough.

The governor said agreement was reached to speed up state payments due in October and next February to help the cities out of their fiscal crises, and to give the cities first crack at the state's share of any additional federal revenue sharing program.

"We're fighting last year's battles," said New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay.

"Originally, they put us 50 feet below the water. To listen to negotiations that only put us 30 feet below is ridiculous because we're still drowning."

The mayors also met with Republican and Democratic legislators in closed-door conferences but failed to win continuance of revenue sharing at the level they sought.

Chairman Spada Back to Albany For State Meeting on Budget

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON
"It is my feeling that the taxpayers have had it," said Ulster County Republican Chairman Albert Spada this morning as he left for a second day of "emergency meetings" in Albany where the GOP is under heavy pressure to cut deeper into Gov. Rockefeller's $7.7 billion budget.

Spada was among the 62 Republican chairmen called to Albany yesterday by the governor in a last minute attempt to apply persuasive pressure on GOP legislators who must vote on the budget before the end of the fiscal year—midnight tonight. In spite of the fact that the Democrats have already voted to oppose Rockefeller's plan and the Republicans have only a three-vote margin in the Assembly and a two-vote edge in the Senate, Spada said, "I think tonight, Spada said he felt they are going to have to pass the Republican legislators have cut all that is not essential from it."

Commenting further, he explained that the Democrats' proposed budget package would increase the budget over the GOP proposal because it does services curtailed. One town not contain as many budget cuts may want a new road, another as the Republicans' latest plan, a sewer system, still another something else. Everyone can't have everything they need and not have increased taxes too.

In making last-minute changes in the state budget, GOP leaders agreed reluctantly to make deeper welfare cuts, take a $5 million slice out of Rockefeller's cultural aid program and restore some funds cut from revenue sharing.

Prosecution Calls 16 In Murder Trial

By WALTER S. CLARK

KINGSTON Testimony of prosecution witnesses resumed today before County Judge Raymond J. Mino and a jury of nine men and three women at the murder trial of Rodney Arnold, 30, of Kerhonkson accused of causing the death of an Allgerville woman on June 1, 1970.

Arnold, father of three is charged in an indictment with the fatal shooting of 31-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth Blaustein less than four hours after the two left the Arnold residence following supper on the night of May 31, 1970.

Since the actual trial began last Thursday, District Attorney Francis J. Vogt has called 16 witnesses for the prosecution, including the defendant's wife, Sandra, and Mrs. Blaustein's husband, Edward.

Investigator Wilfred Holek of the State Police BCI that he was present at the headquarters, Middletown, completed his testimony and cross-examination by defense counsel, Francis Martocci, Tuesday afternoon. He testified that he found three identifiable fingerprints on the outer side of the station wagon in which the woman was fatally wounded, and he said two of the prints matched those of the defendant.

Under cross-examination by Martocci, Holek testified that without identifiable fingerprints from the 9 mm automatic pistol which authorities allege was owned by Arnold and identified as the lethal weapon, he could not say definitely who pulled the trigger the morning of the shooting incident.

Ulster County Coroner William S. Keyser was the 15th prosecution witness. He testified that he was present at the autopsy on Mrs. Blaustein and said he saw x-ray reports that were taken at Ellenville Community Hospital of Mrs. Blaustein. The witness testified that the woman's hair was reddish brown.

BCI Investigator Michael Mahoney of Ellenville, was on the witness stand when court adjourned yesterday. He detailed his part in the investigation and said the gun found in a drainage ditch in the morning of the incident contained 10 live rounds in the clip and one in the chamber of the weapon.

Mahoney said he interviewed several residents of Accord but no one had any knowledge of what had occurred.

Van Wageningen Gets Woodstock Post

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

WOODSTOCK It was the second resignation in recent months by Woodstock Town Justice James R. Myers and, this time, he made it stick.

Myers, serving his first term as Town Justice and member of the Town Board, resigned in a letter submitted to Town Clerk Marjorie Harder Tuesday night. And, during a special meeting following her acceptance of the letter, the board also accepted Myers' resignation; appointed his successor.

Named to serve the resultant interim term was Walter S. Van Wageningen, who retired in 1968 as principal of Woodstock Elementary School after 37 years in that position.

Van Wageningen will serve until Election Day in November. Whoever is elected as Town Justice at that time will assume his position immediately and serve throughout the balance of Myers' unexpired term until Dec. 1, 1973.

Several months ago, Myers submitted his first resignation to the town clerk in a letter that outlined no reasons for the move. That resignation, however, followed a controversy tinged with overtones of acrimony resulting from a press release he authored announcing his own appointment as deputy supervisor of Woodstock.

As it turned out, the announcement was premature since the Town Board had never voted officially on his appointment. The designation was never made subsequently, and the first resignation was never accepted or declined by the board. It was reported that Myers had been persuaded to withdraw it and, since it had never been stamped by the clerk, the matter was dropped. Myers gave no reason the second time around for his resignation. But the action touched off rumors that he might be planning to run for supervisor in the fall. A practicing attorney, admitted to the bar in 1964, he has also been a past president of Woodstock Rotary Club, and an officer of the local library and Chamber of Commerce.

New Town Justice Van Wageningen ended a 41-year career in education with his retirement.

Harassment Is Charged

KINGSTON Accused of causing a disturbance at the home of his sister Tuesday night, Timothy Countryman, 48, of 172 West Pierpont Street, was arrested by police on a charge of harassment. He was scheduled to appear in City Court.

The complaint was made by Marie Gardner of the Pierpont Street address, who accused the defendant of slapping her and creating a disturbance at her home.

Uptown Men Ready Parking Views

KINGSTON

The Uptown Businessmen's Association will offer its recommendations for revisions in uptown parking to Mayor Francis R. Koenig within the next few days. The Freeman learned today.

A meeting called by the Traffic Committee of the Common Council was held Tuesday afternoon in the Savings and Loan Association on Wall Street attended by the mayor, Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo, numerous businessmen, James G. Connors, director of the urban renewal agency and a number of aldermen.

Alderman Peter C. Mancuso (D-12th Ward), chairs the Traffic Committee which has been studying a suggestion by Mayor Koenig to limit parking in order to alleviate traffic congestion in the uptown area.

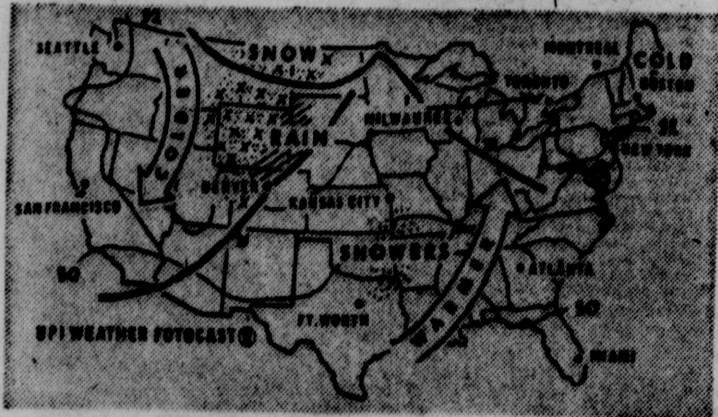

The original suggestion proposed that street parking be banned in the Uptown business area for a period of 90 days.

Mancuso's Committee has now recommended that the mayor issue an executive order banning parking on one side of North Front Street from the New Parking garage to the city parking lots; on the fire house side of Fair Street from North Front to Pearl Street and on John Street from Crown Street to Clinton Avenue with the exception of the taxi stands near Fair Street and a few parking spaces at the beginning of Crown.

A 30-day trial period is recommended, beginning immediately after the Easter shopping days.

Mancuso noted that the original proposal would have moved in excess of 200 parking spaces while the present proposal removes about 50.

U.S. Helicopters Land Commandos in Laos Panhandle

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. helicopters landed a small force of South Vietnamese commandos in the Laotian panhandle today for a raid on a North Vietnamese base.

Speaking to newsmen at Dong Ha, headquarters for the South Vietnamese drive into Laos, president Nguyen Van Thieu said the raiders "landed five minutes ago and attacked a North Vietnamese base in base area 611. Operation Lam Son 719 is still going on and the South Vietnamese army is still on the attack, despite the pull-back of some units into Vietnam."

Lam Son 719 was the code name for the 22,000-man South Vietnamese drive into Laos.

U. S. and South Vietnamese officers said the 200 to 300 South Vietnamese taking part in the raid were members of the elite Hac Bao—Black Panther—Strike Force and the 1st Reconnaissance Company.

The U.S. 101st Airborne Division flew them into Laos in 45 of its Huey helicopters. Ten reserve Hueys and dozens of Cobra gunships accompanied the assault force to the target area, believed to be about five miles inside Laos along Highway 922 and south of the area swept during the recent invasion. The invasion force was supposed to sweep the area on its way out of Laos, but heavy North Vietnamese attacks forced it to abandon that part of the operation.

The raid presumably will be a hit and run attack lasting two or three days, like a raid planned for two days ago but called off at the last minute because of heavy anti-aircraft fire and poor visibility. Today's target, however, appeared to be several miles east of the earlier one, which had been described by informed sources as "bigger than a division headquarters."

Some U.S. sources described the aborted raid as a "political-type operation to show that the South Vietnamese can go anywhere they want. The objective was to inflict maximum casualties on the enemy with minimum friendly casualties and get back out."

Observers also believe another aim is to regain some of the face lost when the North Vietnamese drove the South Vietnamese force out of Laos last week.

Monday's assault was scheduled to be staged out of Quang Tri, the forward American headquarters supporting operations in Laos but on Tuesday the raiding force was flown to a small staging area at Mai Loc.

several miles to the west. Informed sources said they were moved "to get them away from the press."

Although told they could not accompany the force into Laos, two German photographers slipped aboard helicopters leaving Quang Tri. They were ordered off at Mai Loc and reported an American lieutenant of the 101st Airborne held them under guard for about four hours. One of the Germans said his legs were tied for five minutes.

American platoons were reported standing by to go into Laos to protect any helicopters downed in the operation. During the earlier drive into Laos, the Hac Bao did that job.

At a news conference held while inspecting troops who took part in the Laos drive, Thieu said Operation Lam Son 719 was the biggest and most successful of the Vietnam war.

He claimed it had succeeded in cutting the Ho Chi Minh trail and prevented the enemy from launching an offensive in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

He also claimed that the "kill ratio" of the operation was 10 to 1 in favor of the South Vietnamese. But other informed sources have reported a ratio of less than 4 to 1, and that is based on a South Vietnamese claim of nearly 14,000 North Vietnamese killed a figure which U.S. officers consider much exaggerated.

Elsewhere in Indochina, little significant ground fighting was reported, but the U.S. Command announced the loss of six more helicopters—three in Cambodia and three in the northwest part of South Vietnam.

Viet Reds Seek Public Support

PARIS (AP) — The Laotian youth leaned over the red-draped podium and in heavily accented French reported the "total defeat" of the American-South Vietnamese operation in southern Laos.

The applause settled into a disciplined steady beat.

"Fifteen thousand enemy, including 200 GIs were captured, 496 planes, mostly helicopters, were destroyed by the Laos popular forces . . ."

The North Vietnamese minister, happy to give all the credit to the Laotians, joined in the acclaim.

The meeting, in the severely decorated House of the Metal Workers in the shabby Right Bank Republique quarter, was another in a series of efforts by the Vietnamese Communists here to seek public support.

The campaign is promoted mainly by Hanoi. It has made Paris the Vietnamese Communists' main loudspeaker to the world.

The operation employs the best of Western public relations techniques and some of its technology. It includes the friendly handclasp, public appearances, and soft-sell lunches for newsmen and foreign delegations.

Lengthy policy statements from Hanoi, and crisp battle-front communiques, flow by the thousands of words into news agency offices by teleprinter from North Vietnamese headquarters here. Frequently both French and English versions get his statements in order.

are supplied. Over the same circuit come statements attributed to the Pathet Lao, the Cambodian United National Front, or the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government.

Hanoi's hand seems strong in all the information published.

In 1968, when the first round of peace talks began, the Communists had a lot to learn about smoothing contacts with the public. They were hardly seen. Newsmen, except those with Communist organs, were looked upon with suspicion.

Gradually the Vietnamese got on the Paris cocktail circuit and often gave lavish spreads of their own. Their top representatives submitted smilingly to barrages of questions.

American pacifists and church groups have recently spent whole days with top North Vietnamese and Viet Cong officials, who sometimes keep them on for meals.

Communist news briefers at the present round of the peace talks are open to a broad range of questions. The briefers seldom duck behind "no comment" but they have developed a skill at long-winded answers which often slip by the questioners.

Nguyen Thanh Le, the oldest hand at dealing with the Western press, is quick with a Vietnamese proverb that may suffice in translation. He always agency offices by teleprinter from North Vietnamese headquarters here. Frequently both French and English versions get his statements in order.

The check constitutes a portion of the proceeds of Heart Fund Sunday collections in Soguties. Good News for Soviet Citizens MOSCOW (UPI)—The Communist Party has for the first time ordered production of consumer goods expanded to keep ahead of the rising standard of living of Soviet people.

"Saturation" of shops with television sets, washing machines, milk, eggs, butter and similar goods is the ultimate goal of the new program, Party Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev told the 24th Soviet Communist Party Congress Tuesday.

"Consumer goods production must go up at a higher rate than the cash incomes of the Soviet people," Brezhnev said. Emphasis on more and better consumer goods was the key domestic feature of Brezhnev's six-hour address to 6,000 delegates to the Congress at the Kremlin.

The Congress, the first since 1966, reconvened today and heard a report from Gennady Sizov, chairman of the Communist Party Central Auditing Commission.

Sizov, watchdog of finances and efficiency in the party, said the Communist Party "functions precisely and harmoniously with great efficiency."

For the Soviet citizen, the economic spurs were good news. But for the nation's artists and writers there were stern comments.

For instance the party made clear it will tolerate no "slander of Soviet reality" by writers and artists. By implication, it branded Nobel prize winning novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn as such an offender.

"If a writer slanders Soviet reality and helps our ideological adversaries in their fight against Socialism, he deserves only one thing—public scorn," Brezhnev said.

In an apparent reference to Solzhenitsyn, he said:

"There were some people who sought to reduce the diversity of present Soviet reality to problems that have irreversibly receded into the past as a result of the work done by the party to surmount the consequences of the personality cult."

In Kremlin jargon, "personality cult" means Stalinism. Solzhenitsyn's lauded novels have spotlighted Stalin's purges and concentration camps.

Brezhnev also attacked arch-conservative writers who "attempt to whitewash past phenomena which the party had subjected to emphatic and principled criticism." He called for harsher party criticism of "unprincipled" literature.

PLANNING CERTIFICATION—Peter J. Savago, (l), chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, is shown congratulating Dr. David N. Certification Given County Planning Board

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON
The Ulster County Planning Board has received certification for meeting federal area wide planning requirements of the Water and Sewer Facilities Grant Program and the Open Space Land Program.

The certification, according to the federal government, recognizes that Ulster County has an acceptable area wide planning organization which is carrying out long range comprehensive planning for the county.

Without this certification, localities in Ulster County would not be eligible for federal grants for funding for water systems sewer systems or parks.

The grants are needed for projects in Ulster County totaling several million dollars.

Commenting on the needed certification, Herbert Hekler, director of the Ulster County Planning Board said, "it is not merely a theoretical exercise."

"We have critical water problems now, in Milton, in Rosendale which have run out of water recently, and in Esopus where some of the water is polluted... we need financial help to help bail us out."

Regarding sewage projects, Hekler pointed to those already underway as the result of preliminary planning and federal and state aid, naming the City of Kingston and its secondary sewage plant, the Town of Ulster and New Paltz, Barclay Heights too is scheduled for sewage projects.

Preliminary approval meant that your progress and interest in the planning process will benefit Ulster County in providing a means for coordinating resources and developing economical solutions to public improvement needs within your area.

"Please accept our best wishes for continued success in your planning efforts and our congratulations for being one of the first county planning agencies to be certified under the area wide planning certification process."

The County Planning Board was established by the Board of Supervisors in 1963. It consists of unpaid representatives from the City of Kingston and each of the towns and villages of the county.

The board is appointed by the County Legislature and was made responsible for major engineering studies on water supply, sewerage disposal and solid waste disposal. The studies were funded by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. In addition grants have been received from HUD and the State Office of Planning Coordination for studies of transportation, land use, soils, population, recreation and housing.

A land use plan for Ulster County for 1985 was prepared by the board. As a result of these years of hard work and professional staff capability, the Planning Board was able to earn certification for the county.

"We are confident that your progress and interest in the planning process will benefit Ulster County in providing a means for coordinating resources and developing economical solutions to public improvement needs within your area."

F. BARRECCIA

Premeditated murder — a phrase that conjures visions of a black-hearted villain plotting for weeks or months on how best to do in his victim. And yet that was the charge a young Army lieutenant, who has been termed unqualified to begin with, has been convicted of by a jury of officer veterans of the Vietnam war.

It is a certainty that Lt. Calley did not ask to be shipped off to Southeast Asia by an Army that was so hard-pressed for personnel that it had formed the new Americal Division, since judged a mediocre fighting unit which was never fully trained.

It is also a certainty that an inexperienced Calley would not have asked for the command of a company of American soldiers in the hostile, Cong-oriented and infiltrated section of Quang Ngai province. But he was there and he was at My Lai, under Army orders, leading a sorely-pressed group of citizen soldiers when the massacre occurred.

The lieutenant has been convicted of killing at least 22 Vietnamese men, women and children, many of whom were helplessly cowering in a dirty roadside ditch. Actually, after familiarizing oneself with the trial testimony, no one can argue with a verdict of guilty of killing civilians. The question that arises is why — what made a bunch of seemingly normal GIs go out and commit wholesale and indiscriminate mayhem.

War has always been dirty except for the glamorized Hollywood versions which glorify a type of super-soldier who probably never existed. It is unquestionable that atrocities have happened in other wars ranging from the Civil War through the Indian Wars on to World War II and through Korea. Yet these atrocities were hitherto regarded as disgusting but a relatively small part of the main issue. But now we have a soldier convicted of premeditated murder.

The term is unreal because certainly Calley never hatched a preconceived plot to murder the Vietnamese. He testified he received orders from his direct superior, Captain Ernest Medina to kill anything moving in the village.

Calley's defense was that he was only following orders. Unfortunately this was a defense that helped convict Nazi war criminals after WW II, but the Germans and others who were executed did not perform their genocidal activities under the strain of battlefield conditions.

Calley and his unit did. The group of ill-prepared soldiers had suffered the intense harassment of many other American units in the field leading to times when it was impossible to distinguish between friend or foe.

There are recorded instances of pre-teen Viet boys or girls lobbing a grenade at GIs then disappearing into the brush. There are also recorded instances of Viet women planting booby traps in roads at night after fraternizing with the American troops during the day. There are also reported instances of elderly Vietnamese caring for and aiding Viet Cong wounded or stragglers and helping them to return to their units to fight another day.

That is precisely the type of war that Vietnam is. The French never learned to throw away their stereotyped military manuals that they learned by heart at St. Cyr and came to grips with the enemy in guerrilla warfare. That is why the French were humiliated in Vietnam.

Our soldiers have learned the lessons of guerrilla fighting — and that is, in a great part, how the American army must fight this war. Guerrilla fighting — unorthodox, unclear and greatly indiscriminate as to its victims.

That was a great part of the training of Lieutenant Calley and his ragged troop and that is perhaps, Calley's downfall.

There is no question of Calley's guilt but the severity of a sentence of life imprisonment or death is debatable. Perhaps this can be answered if the Cong or North Vietnamese ever try their people involved in the massacres during Tet that resulted in 3,000 Vietnamese civilians dead.

S. Vietnam Town Attacked 200 Civilians Are Killed

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — Two battalions of North Vietnamese troops came down the Ho Chi Minh trail into South Vietnam, attacked and burned a district capital southwest of Da Nang, and inflicted heavy casualties on the civilian population and their militia.

The town of Duc Duc, 25 miles southwest of Da Nang, came under heavy shelling and ground attack Sunday night, and the North Vietnamese held most of the town Monday and Tuesday.

At least 200 Vietnamese civilians were reported killed or wounded along with 18 regional militiamen killed and 36 wounded. A thousand houses were burned.

Reaction Largely Adverse To Jetport Idea

GOSHEN, N.Y. (AP) — A proposal to make a one-time Air Force base into a major jet terminal met with largely adverse reaction Tuesday night at a public hearing here.

Some 150 persons, including 14 members of the Orange County Legislature, attended the discussions, sponsored by the legislature's rules committee.

The public hearings were called in the wake of persistent reports from Albany that Gov. Rockefeller may ask the legislature to approve funds for converting the former Stewart Air Force Base into a fourth-air terminal for the New York metropolitan area.

Town of Montgomery Supervisor Kendall Garrett objected to the conversion, saying the proposed jetport would take 22 square miles of land in the towns of Montgomery, New Windsor, and Newburgh. The present airport, now a general aviation facility, occupies some four square miles.

Other town officials and neighbors of the airport added their criticism, citing possible air and noise pollution, loss of tax revenue, highway relocation, potentially higher local taxes, and the need to relocate people in adjacent housing.

Rhinebeck Zoning Near

By TIM SCHUSTER

RHINEBECK — "Speaking for myself, we are pretty well on the way to adopting the zoning ordinance as it now stands," said Mayor Peter F. Sipperley at the conclusion of what was billed as the final village zoning hearing Tuesday night.

Prior to his conclusion, Mayor Sipperley asked that the residents of Rhinebeck combine to kill a bill in the state legislature sponsored by Senator LaVerne giving the state the zoning powers now held by local municipalities.

He asked that residents write State Senator Jay Rolison and Assemblyman Emeel Betros, as well as county legislators, urging defeat of the LaVerne bill, adding that it would "just about paralyze village and town control over any type of zoning."

Sipperley added that he did not want a situation in Rhinebeck similar to that on Long Island's Suffolk and Nassau Counties where low income housing has become a battleground for zoning.

"We have enough restrictions with the Hudson River Valley Commission and the Dutchess County Planning Board," he said.

The public hearing, the sixth over a 15 month period, was highlighted by controversy over the Fried factory property on East Market Street and the Montgomery Street (Route 9 north) zoning of either residential or commercial.

In response to derogatory remarks about the appearance of his property, Robert Fried asked that criteria be established for appearance and that his property would then conform.

Robert Cook presented a petition signed by residents of Montgomery Street asking that the area in question remain residential, and Mayor Sipperley assured him that this was the intention of the Board of Trustees.

The basic philosophical point of whether Rhinebeck should be considered a "sleeping town" was debated, with Robert Anderson contending that the concerted effort to keep out industry constituted the designation.

And another resident asked, "What's wrong with having a sleeping town?"

Robert Fried told the gathering that plans for the Rhinebeck plant closely parallel those of his Staatsburg plant inasmuch as he would like to increase square footage by 50 per cent every two years.

"Our Virginia Project was originally scheduled for Rhinebeck, but is not here because of the zoning," he contended. He said that he had plans to put in a paint line, and eventually hardware and houseware operation in his Rhinebeck plant, but could not if his property expansion is limited by residential zoning.

On the Montgomery Street question, Planning Board Chairman Eleanor Closs affirmed that individual gains were not considered when making up the plan, as inferred by some persons, but that the best interests of the village were foremost.

Michael Strong argued that the Delamater House, historical landmark, was nothing more than a football tossed about to justify spot zoning Montgomery Street. He asked that either commercial or residential designations be applied to both sides of the street.

James Bourne noted that he was on the original Planning Board and it had specifically designated the Delamater House area as residential to save it.

And Planning Board member Roy Anderson said that the present Rhinebeck business district does have more than enough room for additional businesses, with 898 frontage feet and about 90,000 square feet of possible floor space available without expanding the business district.

One resident asked why a swamp had been designed as industrial area when no industry could possibly use it and it was the last vestige of wooded land in the village.

The answer from Mrs. Closs and Mayor Sipperley was that there had been public outcry for some industrial area in the village for real estate tax reasons, and it was felt that this was the least harmful.

And when one resident asserted that an old citizens' survey on village sewerage had been the basis for arbitrary zoning designation lines in the northern part of the village, Sipperley responded that "sewerage has been a dead issue since 1963 and has not been revived," citing a lack of funds as the primary reason.

It was estimated that several weeks will pass before final enactment of the zoning law takes place.

School Board To Hear Plea

KINGSTON — A resolution calling for additional partial exemption from school taxes for persons over 65 years of age will be presented at Thursday's meeting of the Board of Education of the Kingston City Schools Consolidated.

Currently, persons earning $3,000 or less are exempt from paying one-half of their school taxes. Many school districts have increased that ceiling to $4,000 or $5,000.

Harry M. Thayer of Kingston has requested a place on Thursday's agenda to discuss dental hygiene.

Resolutions will also be submitted dealing with blanket coverage for insurance, the approaching elections, transportation and a bond resolution.

The Board will meet in executive session at 7:30 p.m., with the public meeting scheduled for 8:30 p.m. at the Board of Education office at the George Washington School, 67 Wall Street.

A Calley Comrade Comes to His Defense

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Charles S. Seketa, a former company commander — a comrade in arms of Lt. William Calley and Capt. Ernest Medina — looked over the newspaper headlines Tuesday and hesitated. They told of Calley's statement to his court martial jury.

"He is that man — the statement — it is the man he always wanted to be and finally is," Seketa said.

Calley had told the court martial that he did his soldierly duty, that he obeyed orders, and that he did not think in terms of men, women and children but in terms of enemy soldiers.

Charles Seketa was the commander of Company D, Eleventh Brigade, Americal Division. He was a drinking companion of Calley's immediate superior officer, Capt. Medina. He also knew Calley well.

The camaraderie has been that way and remains so in some U.S. Army outfits. The officer corps of the unit was close. They often traded men, supplies, and tales.

"My company was operating about 100 miles to the south," the former infantry captain remembered on March 18, 1968. That was the day of the My Lai murders in South Vietnam.

"I knew Calley well. We all were in Hawaii together. He was very proud of the unit.

"I like him. He was in charge of my security when I landed," Seketa said, referring to his first day in the war zone.

"I suppose he wanted to be a hero in My Lai, but he failed. Now he's done it — he's going out in style. It's something I would expect from a man from the First of the 20th," he added.

The First Battalion of the 20th Infantry was the original outfit in Hawaii and it was the designation that Seketa and other officers of the unit continued to use even in Vietnam.

The Americal Division was formed after they arrived, Seketa said.

"Charlie Company," which was Capt. Medina's and in which Calley was a platoon leader, "was always the best. They were the first of the brigade in South Vietnam. They had to be the epitome of perfection.

In the whole outfit it was drilled into the men — a mistake is a life. Never let the V.C. get one up on you," he said, indicating the type of psychology constantly used on the troops and the low-ranking officers.

There is the constant frustration of being "psyched up" to kill and then having no one to shoot," said Seketa, now a partner with his brother in a Syracuse building cleaning company.

"There was only one type of operations order to give — that's a tough one. You had to have them ready.

"It was an obsession with our officers to save lives. To search the troops was the only way to do it."

The 48th V.C. Regiment, which Seketa said was a crack, professional enemy outfit, "was supposed to be there and knowing Calley, I suppose he was going to prove to Ernie (Medina) that he was a good officer."

That would have been important to Calley," Seketa said.

"I still don't know how they could find him guilty of premeditated murder. Once you got started killing one over there, the rest was easy. A feeling of complicity set in."

"I don't think the country should be pacified. The country should realize war crimes are wrong. A reasonable punishment should be set and held so not colored later by command and political considerations."

But Seketa was just as sure that the choice of life or death as a sentence for Calley was not proper because "he is not a cold-blooded killer."

But Will Comply With Nixon

Construction Union Bosses Vow Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction union leaders vow a legal fight against President Nixon's new wage stabilization order, but add they will comply with the law of the land.

The labor officials were vague about how they will attack Nixon's executive order in court, but C.J. Haggerty, president of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO said, "with all the legal power at our command we intend to fight this plan for more equity."

Haggerty also told newsmen Tuesday the 17 craft unions involved have not decided whether they will sit on wage stabilization review boards established by Nixon's order.

The boards, composed of labor and management officials, will review wage settlements to determine if they meet Nixon's order's restrictions. While the wage limits are flexible, they generally tie wage boosts to an average of not more than 6 percent a year.

The administration said Monday the system of wage restraints is largely a self-regulating process depending on the cooperation of unions and contractors.

Haggerty took issue with Nixon's assertion that construction didn't go as far in the price field, setting in motion machinery to develop limitations on prices in the industry.

The craft presidents said also it was unfair to impose wage restraints while setting up a "vague procedure with respect to prices and profits."

While Nixon's order establishes flexible wage criteria, it will not be in compliance in any way to develop limitations on prices in the industry.

The administration has shied away from calling the new plan wage and price controls, preferring to label them constraints or restraints.

But Haggerty said, "in our view, the contrary is not consistent with the facts."

FIVE-ALARM BLAZE — Flames leap from top story of 5-story apartment building, Back Bay section of Boston, during 5-alarm fire early today. At least four persons were killed in fire. Fire officials expected to find more bodies. Many of the apartment dwellers were rescued over ladders. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

Four Boston Fire Deaths

BOSTON (AP) — Flames swept the upper floors of an apartment building early today. Fire officials said four persons died, 12 were injured and others were missing in the blaze of "suspicious origin."

Lt. George Lee, public relations officer of the fire department, said there had been two other fires of suspicious origin in the five-story brick structure during the past year.

Lee reported seven deaths at first but revised the figure later.

The dead included a baby, just after 12:30 a.m., and neighbors said they thought most of the victims were older persons.

Other tenants made their way through smoky hallways or metal fire escapes to exits.

Stewart Thayer, 52, who came down a ladder from his bathroom window, said when he left he heard someone screaming "get me out, get me out."

The Hoffa Decision Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Parole Board decides today whether to parole James R. Hoffa, Teamsters president, who was sentenced to life in prison for racketeering.

President James R. Hoffa, Parole would almost certainly enable Hoffa to resume control of the world's largest union.

The Board's decision was to be announced by Chairman George J. Reed immediately following a late-morning session with two Hoffa attorneys.

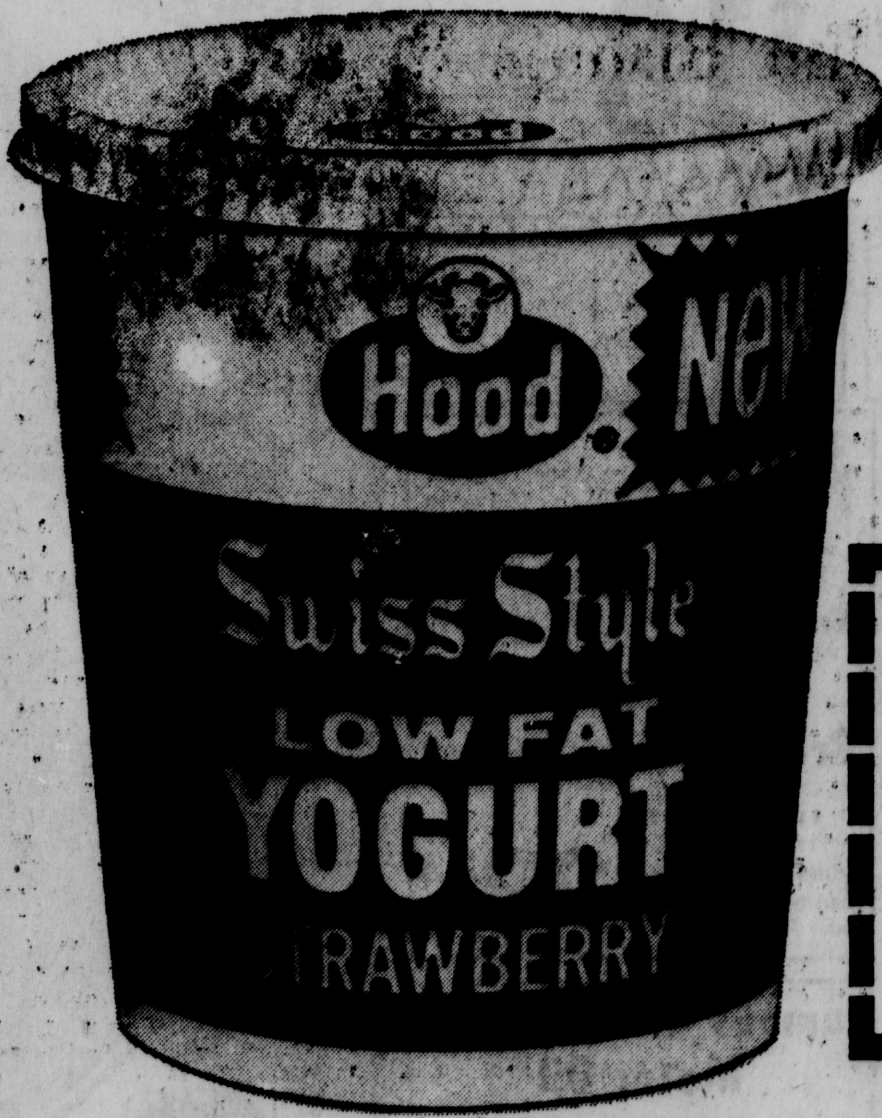

The Justice Department said it would have no representative at the hearing.

The department has confirmed it would not oppose Hoffa's five-year term as Teamsters president expires in July and the union will hold elections at its Miami Beach convention. Most union sources have predicted Hoffa would win easily if he is available to run.

If he were unavailable, sources said his hand-picked stand-in, acting President Frank E. Fitzsimmons, probably would be elected to the $100,000-a-year post.

First Economize

March 27, 1971

Editor, The Freeman.

Last week two items in the news on the same day seemed to be an ironic contradiction of each other.

In one, Assemblyman Bell revealed the outrageous fact that the State supplies the Commissioner of Education, as well as the heads of the State Universities, with houses. This is, of course, in addition to substantial salaries. In the case of the Commissioner of Education, as you will recall, the house is valued at $200,000. This figure is enough to set anyone aback—but this just a beginning. The maintenance for the grounds of this palace is $5,000 a year with additional maintenance running equally as high. And, of course, none of this is on the tax rolls.

The ironic part comes with the comments of our local Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Saltzman stated that he had held several meetings at various schools in our district in an effort to inform the public of the monetary crisis in our schools. He went on to say that the attendance had been poor and, therefore, felt the public was apathetic. May I suggest that while there is undoubtedly a great deal of apathy in our society, the lack of interest displayed in these meetings may not all be due to this cause.

Did it ever occur to those responsible for our schools, from the local level to the state level, that the taxpayers feel they cannot carry a heavier load. This certainly does not mean they are not interested in the quality of education. However, it is about time our school officials and state legislators started looking for places to economize in their own halliwicks. Let them do this before they again try to hold the stick over the taxpayers' heads threatening a decline in our educational systems.

We all want the best education possible for our children. What do these palatial homes have to do with these educations though? Before we begin raising taxes again in the name of education, let us be sure it is truly for education and not for the super-comfort of a few. I am certain there are many instances beyond the hideous one cited above where economies could be practiced and have no effect on the quality of education as it relates to our children.

Sincerely,
JONATHAN WAGMAN

Capital Punishment

March 26, 1971

Editor, The Freeman

Now that I know where the Kingston Area Council of Churches stands on the issue of capital punishment, I'd like to ask the Community Relations Committee to reveal their position on other issues that should concern the Christian community. What is your stand on abortion, draft resistance, drug addiction, off-track betting, sex movies, taxation of church-owned business properties, and pornographic literature?

Other questions I would like to receive answers to concern representation. Just who is the Council speaking for when they make a pronouncement? Of the approximately 40 Christian churches in the Kingston area, how many are members of the Kingston Council? Of these member churches, what is their total communicant membership? Of this membership, how many hold the same views as expressed by this pronouncement? The answers should be very interesting!

Mr. Veatch's letter of March 18 states "Church groups oppose it (capital punishment) because it is wrong..." I'm sure he misspoke himself. He meant to say "Clergymen of the Community Relations Committee oppose it."

Sincerely,
SHELDON G. MARTIN

Taxpayers Have No Voice

March 29, 1971

Editor, The Freeman

Mr. Louis Salzmann, the Superintendent of Schools, made a recent statement about the lack of interest shown at four meetings that he conducted. He explained some of the problems ahead for the taxpayers—only 350 people showed up.

I would like to enlighten Mr. Salzmann, Mr. Shaw and the Board of Education as to how this probably came about.

In 1958 the people were presented with a public opinion vote, the vote was 2281 for 2559 against consolidation of the Kingston School system and out-lying districts, but the Board of Education went against the majority of the people and discarded it and voted in favor of consolidation. That was the beginning.

Since that time I can't recall when the taxpayers were listened to, or had a voice in any decisions.

Mr. Salzmann made a statement that if state aid is not will go up or we will have to curtail some of our local programs, including transportation.

Isn't it ironic that he didn't make this speech before the Board of Education voted 7 to 2, to spend $356,000 on School #7 for a plush administration building a few weeks ago?

Over 70 people were at a meeting over a month ago, including WHITA, the Concerned Citizens Committee, and the public. Everybody spoke against spending $356,000 for #7 school.

At the following meeting, and even before the meeting started, we were handed the agenda. Included, of course, were the accepted bids for the remodeling of #7 school.

Just how long do you think the taxpayers will attend meetings without having a voice in the decisions? Is 13 years long enough?

Sincerely,

TED WEINER

Liberty Amendment

March 27, 1971

Editor, The Freeman:

With Income Tax date just around the corner, I felt this an opportune time to acquaint the readers of this paper with the Liberty Amendment.

Most of us are becoming very concerned about the way taxes are building up at every level of government. When we think of the effect this has upon ourselves and our families in depriving us of many things we need and want, we ought to be interested in finding a solution.

I think we do have a solution. It is a proposed amendment to the U. S. Constitution known as the Liberty Amendment.

Briefly the amendment stipulates that Federal business activities that are NOT authorized by the Constitution shall be sold back to the public, and the federal personal income tax shall be repealed. This includes inheritance and gift taxes.

Today over 700 federal agencies compete with private enterprise at a great loss. They are involved in insurance, electric generation and transmission, railroads, warehouses, transportation, etc. They consume enormous quantities of our tax dollars, and lose more money every year than is collected by the federal personal income tax.

If the government would turn these agencies over to private businesses, they in turn would pay corporate taxes, which would bring in to the government much more money than the income tax does now. This money would keep the United States operating, protecting our national defense, paying for past, present and future wars.

The Liberty Amendment is at present pending in Congress as H.J. Res. 23, and is already approved by several states.

A complete kit of information can be obtained for $1.00 by writing to Liberty Amendment Committee of the U.S.A., 6413 Franklin Avenue, Los Angeles, California, 90028.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. Rose M. Aprea

The Changes For Interior

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's proposed federal reorganization would, if adopted, convert the Interior Department from an agency traditionally rooted in Western land to a manager of the nation's vital resources.

Land, water, minerals and fuels, the sciences of ocean, atmosphere and earth: All would become the responsibility of the proposed Department of Natural Resources.

The Interior Department already has a hand in these areas but it would, in the reorganization, annex huge areas now governed by other agencies, giving Interior truly national scope and authority for the first time in its 125-year history.

Absorbing the entire present Interior Department, the proposed Department of Natural Resources would receive:

- The Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Agricultural and economic research services; and watershed loans program, all from the Department of Agriculture.
- Planning and funding of civil functions from the Army Corps of Engineers.
- Civilian atomic energy development functions from the Atomic Energy Commission.
- All functions of the now-independent Water Resources Council.
- Oil and gas pipeline safety programs from the Department of Transportation.
- The entire National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, created only last year as a branch of the Commerce Department.

In the process, the Interior Department would swell from its 1971 size of 57,920 employees and a $2 billion yearly budget to some 110,708 employees and an annual $5 billion budget.

The Agriculture Department alone—slated for dismantling under the Nixon plan—would contribute over 37,000 employees including 21,430 in the Forest Service and 14,419 in the Soil Conservation Service.

The department itself also would be reorganized, realigning its present functions and accommodating new ones.

Operational activities would be divided among five branches:

- Land and Recreation Resources, absorbing functions of the present Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife and Parks; land responsibilities of the present assistant secretary for Public Land Management; and such newly-acquired areas as the Forest Service.
- Water resources, based on the present assistant secretary for Water and Power.
- Energy and Mineral Resources, enlarging the role of the present assistant secretary for Mineral Resources to cover the broadened responsibilities in energy, especially atomic development.
- Indian and Territorial Affairs, assigning these responsibilities a separate division of their own and separating them from land management, where they are now consigned.
- Oceanic, Atmospheric and Earth Sciences, combining Interior's present geologic activities with the ocean-atmosphere role to be transferred from the Commerce Department.

In his message to Congress, Nixon indicated that Indian affairs might be as out of place in his proposed new department as some critics say it is today in the Interior Department.

Indian programs, Nixon said, would be administered by the Natural Resources Department "until such time as an acceptable alternative arrangement could be worked out with Indian leaders and other concerned parties."

In calling for the new department, one of four to be created by melding seven existing agencies, the President said that as it now stands "various parts of the interdependent environment are still under the purview of highly independent federal offices."

"As a result, federal land policies, water programs, mineral policies, forestry practices, recreation activities and energy programs cannot be easily coordinated, even though the manner in which each is carried out has a great influence on all the others."

Chamber Sets Member Drive

KINGSTON
The Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce will conduct a one-day membership drive this Friday, it was announced today by Len Cane, executive vice-president of the Chamber.
David H. Rylance, chairman of the membership drive, has set a minimum goal of 60 new members. He said that each member has been asked to participate in the drive and he added that no current member will be asked to call on more than prospects.
Rylance has called an orientation meeting for Thursday morning at 8 p.m. in the Governor Clinton Hotel, where details will be explained and assignments made. It is expected that preliminary contacts will be made on Thursday.
At the conclusion of the campaign, between 5 and 6 p.m. Friday, a Dutch-treat cocktail hour will be held for new members and their sponsors at the hotel.
The Chamber currently has more than 300 members, but will expand to a county-wide basis in the near future.

Peace Corps May Stay Intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's plan for a national volunteer service corps has run aground amid administration bickering over the course it will steer, it has been learned.
Although the final draft is not complete, there was speculation Nixon will select a plan dismantling VISTA but keeping the Peace Corps virtually intact.
In a speech at the University of Nebraska Jan. 14, Nixon said he would propose a new agency merging the Peace Corps, Volunteers in Service to America—VISTA—and a number of other programs scattered throughout the federal government.
Since the speech, a task force representing the Peace Corps, the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Office of Budget and Management has been trying to come up with a plan to present to Congress.

After four drafts and many meetings, the latest Tuesday, the parties still are far apart on many issues, including the name of the proposed agency which Nixon had called the National Volunteer Corps.
Nixon assigned the task of formulating the new agency to the budget office even though he had announced it would be headed by Peace Corps Director Joseph Blatchford. It was understood the budget office had become so tied up with Nixon's Cabinet reorganization plan that it asked the Peace Corps to come up with a working paper.

A plan advanced by the Peace Corps and opposed by the OEO would dismantle VISTA, the embattled domestic service agency. The Peace Corps would continue as a part of the new agency.
VISTA would be replaced by four new corps—for public safety, health, ecology and, later, education—embracing only a small part of VISTA's present activities in behalf of the poor.
"The new agency will have international and domestic divisions," said one Peace Corps official. "We're not about to change the Peace Corps; it's been successful."

Bubbly Disease Fatal to Fish In Three States

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Governors of three states have asked Congress for $8 million to combat the creation of nitrogen-saturated water which threatens the extinction of salmon and steelhead trout in the Columbia and Snake rivers.
Scientists told a public hearing Tuesday that close to 70 percent of fish passing through the water were dying of nitrogen bubble disease, or aerobolism in the blood stream, a condition known to human divers as "the bends."

They said the nitrogen concentration was caused by water plunging over dam spillways into deep pools below, where pressure was high. The cure is to modify the dams so that the water flows more gently through other outlets.
Salmon and steelhead are a valuable commercial and sports fishing resource in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Some $250 million has been spent on Columbia River hatcheries which cost about $6 million to operate each year.

"Two more years like 1970 and the salmon and steelhead fisheries may become a thing of the past," said Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho, who joined with the governors of the other two states in the appeal to Congress.

The steelhead and salmon hatch in fresh water, grow to adulthood in the sea and return to the streams of their birthplace to spawn.

The salmon and steelhead run in spring and summer, when power demands are low and more water goes over the spillways than through the electric generator turbines. The baby fish en route to the sea, and the adults returning to spawn, hit the nitrogen-saturated water at the worst possible time and most of them never make it.

The problem was long in surfacing because the symptoms of nitrogen bubble poisoning quickly disappear in dead fish biologists said. Tuesday's disclosure was the result of an intensive study of the Columbia in recent months by Army engineers.

More Mercury From Fish In Western Lake Erie

BUFFALO (AP) — Fish from western sections of Lake Erie contain more mercury than fish from the lake's eastern waters, a State University at Buffalo study shows.
The study said fish samples from the lake's western and central areas showed mercury levels above federal safety standards.
Dr. K.K.S. Pillay of the school's Nuclear Research Center told the American Chemical Society that more industrial polluters were on the western end of the lake, accounting for the higher mercury level.
Pillay presented his team's report today to the society's national meeting in Los Angeles. He said the team took more than 700 fish samples from more than a dozen points in the lake.
The scientists also sampled water, sediment, plankton and algae.

Pillay said mercury concentrations were found in sediment samples taken a foot below the bottom of the lake. He said finding mercury at that depth indicated that mercury has been accumulating there for a long time.
He added that the ground accumulations mean that even if mercury pollution were stopped immediately, it would take years for the lake to recover.
Pillay said samples at the mouth of the Buffalo River taken in January 1971 showed the same mercury concentrations as six months before despite the government-ordered closing of one industrial polluter.
Mercury in some fish samples ranged as high as 0.8 parts per million, Pillay said. He said the government has set 0.5 parts per million as a safety standard.
The Buffalo team plans to test for cadmium and selenium concentrations in coming months, Pillay said.

Man Won't Destroy Dog, Killed Young Daughter

LITTLE WALTHAM, England (UPI)—Winton Goodchild said today he had no intention of destroying his dog because it killed his 19-month old daughter.
"I know the dog will never strike again," said Goodchild, 35. His daughter, Sarah Jane, died Monday three hours after his part German Shepherd dog Blackie leaped into her cot and bit her on the face, back and legs.
"I think it was slightly jealous at the attention the baby got," Goodchild said. "This is a terrible tragedy for our family, but we feel we would suffer even more if we had the dog destroyed."

His wife said "even though my daughter is dead, I could not allow the dog to be killed."
Spokesmen for the police and Home Office said they had no power to order the dog destroyed. A charge that the dog was dangerous must be made and then proved in court, the Home office spokesman said.
Today, the Goodchilds left their two other children, aged 11 and 3½, home alone with Blackie while they made arrangements for Sarah Jane's funeral.

Haviland Historical Collection Now Part of New Paltz Library

POUGHKEEPSIE
One of the most complete historical collections relating to Ulster County and the Mid-Hudson Valley area is now available for public use at the Elting Memorial Library in New Paltz, according to an announcement by William Heidgerd, trustee and curator of the recently organized and catalogued Haviland Historical Collection.

The work dates back to the turn of the century and the early years of the New Paltz Library when gift books were received relating to the history of the New Paltz area of Ulster County, including Sylvester's History of Ulster County, a History of the Town of Marlboro and Ralph LeFevre's History of New Paltz. Added in later years were gifts from various estates, including a complete set of Brink's Olde Ulster and a number of books and pamphlets concerning New Paltz and its nineteenth century life as well as folklore.

The Haviland Historical Collection was so named to honor Mrs. Edward S. Haviland of Salisbury, Conn., recently deceased, in recognition of her untiring efforts and interest in the project. She was the former Mrs. Joseph Hasbrouck Vanderlyn who was one of the original trustees when the New Paltz Free Public Library received its charter in 1909. The name was later changed to the Elting Memorial Library in honor of Philip LeFevre Elting who provided the funds for purchase of the original building. In 1950 approximately fifty books and pamphlets made up the collection. By 1970 this figure increased to over two thousand.

Through the cooperation of consultant and other services provided by the Mid-Hudson Libraries central service agency in Poughkeepsie over the past two years, the collection has been catalogued under the Dewey Decimal System and whenever possible Library of Congress cards obtained. Cataloguing operations are at present about 90 percent complete.

Over the years, basic historical publications have been received from the Gift and Exchange Division of the New York State Library. Out-of-print items offered by book dealers have been purchased by the Elting Memorial Library from time to time. A complete set of the New York State Laws from Volume I to the present, a gift from the Town of New Paltz, has been added.

For a modest sum, the library was able to obtain the remnant of the Albany Munsell Collection which includes references to more than 3,000 families.

In his public announcement, Heidgerd said that in behalf of the Board of Trustees of the Elting Memorial Library Association of New Paltz, he was, "Extremely grateful to the many people who helped to make the project possible, and particularly to the director and staff of Mid-Hudson Libraries for their professional help and guidance over the past two years."

He expressed hope that students and others interested would make good use of the library's facilities for research.

Librarians in charge of the special collection are Mrs. Reidar Haugan and Jonathan Pyle who will be at the library every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, from 1 to 4 p.m. Visits may be arranged on these same days, from 7 to 9 p.m. by special appointment.

Local PO Clerks to Have Voice in Merger

Organized postal clerks here will be given a voice in national merger talks that could create one big postal union with more than half a million members.

Maurice Linder, president of Kingston Local 4770 of the United Federation of Postal Clerks, said today that five unions in the U.S. Postal Service have already agreed in principle to create a single new union.

"Local clerks," he said, "will vote yes or no on the question in a national referendum to be held later this year as a result of merger initiatives by the UFPC national leadership."

Linder added that the impetus for "One Big Union" was heightened in Washington recently when the presidents of the UFPC—an AFL-CIO affiliate—and the independent National Postal Union (NPU) agreed on merger terms.

"That brought the number of participating postal unions to five," he said. "The only significant non-participant at this stage is the Letter Carriers Union. And it is hoped that negotiations with them at the national level will resume in the near future."

Linder said the five postal unions will ask their respective memberships to approve a new constitution creating a brand new union to be known as the American Postal Workers Union AFL-CIO.

"If a simple majority of each union agrees in referendum votes," he added, "the new union will have more than a half million members ranking it among the nation's largest."

In addition to the United Federation of Postal Clerks and the National Postal Union, the other unions currently in the merger pact are: The Post Office Motor Vehicle Employees, the Special Delivery Messengers and the Post Office General Services and Maintenance Employees.

Linder said the mergers are deemed vital by postal union leaders to cope with "anywhere near even terms in future collective bargaining with the vast power of the new semi-independent U.S. Postal Service."

Teachers, Parents Conference Day

SAUGERTIES talking with parents. Several are to be commended. We are most grateful also for the fine response of the parents and we hope they found the conferences helpful in our common task of educating their children. Parents who could not be scheduled last Friday may arrange conferences at their convenience.

The first Superintendent's Conference Day for teachers and parents held in Saugerties recently was described as a complete success. Pupils were excused from elementary schools in order that teachers could arrange conferences with 16 to 18 parents during the day. The conference day was suggested by the Superintendent's Advisory Council and plans were developed by the four elementary school principals.

At Main Street all but 12 of the 341 parents scheduled kept their appointments in spite of the bad weather conditions in the late afternoon. Morse School held 332 conferences. Glasco reported that 97 per cent of the appointments were kept. Approximately 400 conferences were scheduled at Mt. Marion school.

Several principals reported on the reactions of teachers. The great majority approved and considered the conference a success. Some wanted two or three days scheduled throughout the year. Most felt that the contact between teacher and parent would be exceptionally valuable in understanding the child. Teachers claimed they gained greater insight through the discussions.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Dexter O. Arnold stated, "It is obvious that principals and teachers in general put time and effort into planning for the conferences and this procedure proved to be worthwhile. They

Blue Patrol Lights Required

Article 9 Section 375 Sub-division 2 a & b of the Vehicle and Traffic Laws of the State of New York.

Every motor vehicle except motorcycles driven upon the public highways during the period between 1/2 hour after sunset to 1/2 hour before sunrise, and any other time when visibility ahead of such vehicle is not clear for a distance of 1000 feet shall display at least two lighted head-lamps of equal source of power on the front thereof, one on each side; a white, illuminating light on the rear license plate; and (if a 1951 or older car) at least one red tail-light visible for at least 500 ft.; (if a 1962 or newer car) at least two red tail-lights, one on each side, visible for a distance of at least 1000 feet.

With all the unfortunate "fender-bender" accidents sustained during the "slippery season" in our part of the country, there emerge a large number of "one-eyed" vehicles coming at you at night! Some cars have tail-lights damaged, completely demolished front & rear corners, and license-plate lights that are either burned out, or broken, due to backing into a snow-bank or such. It becomes a quite tense few moments when the vehicle approaching you at night on a narrow roadway exhibits only one headlight, and you suddenly become involved in a guessing contest to decide "which side is it on?" The operator of the "one-eyed" vehicle is a type of gambler, himself, since the loss of the illumination of the non-functional light deprives him of safe vision of the roadway ahead, and any obstruction which may be thereon.

If you drive one of these "one-eyed-monsters," and are "waiting for the body-repair shop to get it fixed," try to keep in mind that this section legally drive the vehicle in this condition, and in so doing, you not only jeopardize your own safety, along with the safety of other motorists, but you also are in violation, and may be summoned for it.

The police officer would rather you have it fixed, and comply with the rules enacted for your protection, than issue you a summons for the violation! He really does have more important and "better things to do;" help him to more efficiently take care of his other tasks and responsibilities to the public by taking care of your responsibilities related to your car.

Another Body Recovered From Hotel Fire Ruins

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (UPI) — The search through debris at the fire-scarred Canandaigua Inn yielded another body Tuesday, bringing to five the number of deaths in the Monday morning blaze.

The body was identified as that of Herman Large, 55, of Somerset, Pa., one of several outpatients at the Veterans Administration Hospital who had been staying at the hotel.

Workers, using a 100-foot crane to lift debris through the roof of the once plush four-story brick structure, continued to dig for two other persons still unaccounted for.

The body of David Owens, 47, of the Syracuse suburb of Camillus was recovered Monday, and two other bodies were also found. No identification was available but the victims were believed to be among the four persons listed as unaccounted for.

Missing were Stanley Briggs, 52, of East Rochester; Ruben Gebell, 58, of Niagara Falls; Philip Luke, 51, of the Buffalo suburb of Collins; and Edward Higley, 55, of Corry, Pa. Fifty-six persons were registered in the hotel at the time of the fire. About a dozen were hospitalized with injuries. Officials declined comment on the cause of the fire pending completion of their investigation.

Heart Health

By MID-HUDSON HEART ASSOCIATION, INC. KINGSTON

With interest centered on diet and menus for heart patients and for those who wish to keep their cholesterol intake low, this column, from time to time, will feature recipes that are nutritious, simple to make and have a low cholesterol content.

Top o' the stove meat loaf for two is the first recipe in this new series. Crumble onto a plate 1/2 pound very lean ground beef (or veal). Sprinkle over the meat 1 tablespoon steak sauce or soy sauce, 2 tablespoons wheat germ, dash of garlic salt, one-third teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and dash of monosodium glutamate. Shape lightly into two small loaves and place on rack in the top pan of a double boiler. Cover, place top pan over water in the lower pan of the double boiler and boil rapidly. Cook until meat is done — about 60 to 70 minutes. Remove fat from drippings, and make gravy. Sage, oregano or seasonings may be substituted.

For more information about the low fat, low cholesterol diet, write or phone the Mid-Hudson Heart Association, 72 Main Street, Kingston.

Ex-Addict Assists Others

NEW YORK (UPI)—"When I lecture on narcotic abuse, I tell them—I love taking drugs. What I don't like is what it does to me."

And heroin's effect on the life-style of the 37-year-old woman who made this statement is still present even though she has been off drugs for five years.

Amelia Macri "shot junk" for six years, did 23 stints in the Women's House of Detention in Manhattan, and nearly died in a fire when heroin's euphoria made her oblivious to peril.

Today this ex-addict is hospital liaison for the city's Addiction Services Agency (ASA), gives lectures for the Queens District Attorney's Office and holds a security pass to the House of D.

"When I left the House of D the last time, the guards waved to me and said, 'Goodbye, Macri, see you again,'" she said. "They did too—only I came in the front door."

To come through the front door took a long time. So vivid are the memories of hustling to support her habit, shooting up, the sickness of withdrawing from Heroin—and the guilt—that she has dedicated herself to keeping others out of the drug scene.

Mrs. Macri, whose teen-age marriage at 17 ended after a second child was born, began her drug career at 26 and admits she "wasn't as hooked on drugs as I was on the guy I was going with," a junkie musician.

"Every time he went to jail, I was clean," she said. "As soon as he got out, five minutes later I had a spike (needle) in my arm."

Awareness of what she was doing to herself came six years later, and only after a fire nearly claimed her life and Narcotics Anonymous, a defunct program modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous took an interest in her.

Since that time, the attractive five-foot-zero brunette who curls her upper lip and flays her arms as she talks about drugs, has become totally enmeshed in her work.

At ASA, Mrs. Macri said her dedication has driven her administrators to put her on "the pay-me-no-mind list" because she is constantly suggesting revamping present drug programs and offering outlines for the creation of others.

Although her own job calls only for her to screen addicts and refer them to hospitals for treatment, Mrs. Macri has added the chore of follow-up work on some individuals.

"That follow-up entails visiting them, getting to know them and then making an evaluation as to what type of treatment program would be good for that type of individual," she said.

Mrs. Macri is in constant touch with drug rehabilitation programs and once took two New York youths to Boston because it offered the "best type of program for them."

This is the way ASA's fighting little lady operates but she decries the fact that too many areas are neglected. There is no program set up in the prisons, she said, and addicts released from jail immediately return to drugs.

"And when I say we need a prison program, I'm talking from experience," Mrs. Macri said.

Amelia Macri has five surgical scars on her body, the result of tattoo removal as well as rehabilitation from drug addiction.

During one of her 23 times in prison she talked another inmate into doing a tattoo of a musical clef on her ankle. Mrs. Macri was released a short time later, rearrested on another drug charge and returned to the same prison. Three more tattoos were done—a cross, an arrow and the name of a boyfriend.

Armed Services Committee

Chief Counsel Is Power Behind the Throne

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Armed Services Committee has a new chairman, and one new "dove" member, and one or two new rules of procedure. But there is not likely to be anything new in its approach to military requirements.

The committee's chief counsel, John Russell Blandford, is one big reason. He is the undeviating force behind what the committee's fans call its "steady reliability," and what its critics term "single-minded cussedness."

When one of the younger members of Armed Services learned that the new chairman, Democrat F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana, intended to retain Blandford as head of the committee's 14-man professional staff, he sighed and recalled the adage that "the more things change, the more they remain the same."

Virtually unknown to the general public and answerable only to the committee chairman, the 53-year-old Blandford draws power from all three components of the so-called military-industrial complex: the military services, the defense industry, and Congress.

He wields the power to nurture some proposals, defend others, ride down opposition to pet programs, and even initiate a few himself.

He does not deprecate his role. One committee member who does not count himself among Blandford's foes recently called him a "potentate" in a private conversation.

Another congressman explained: "He sits on the war. He reached the rank of major in his war-time service in the Marine Corps.

With his stocky build and close cropped hair, Blandford looks like a retired Marine top sergeant. Actually, he is a major general in the Marine Corps reserves—a rank that is another source of irritation to some of his foes on the committee.

"Just how many men do you think have risen from major to major general in the Marine reserves?" One of them asked recently. "Just one, that's how many. Russ Blandford. He made it because they were afraid not to promote him every time he asked for it."

Most of the criticism of Blandford comes from five original (now grown to seven) dissidents known in the House as the "fearless five" for their defiance of an established committee procedure which virtually barred amendments to military bills and which resulted in authorizations frequently larger but almost never smaller than the Pentagon asked.

Blandford is a Republican, but operates on a strictly non-partisan basis. He was hired by a GOP chairman, former Rep. George W. Andrews of New York, during the 80th Congress in 1947, but was promoted to chief counsel by one Democrat—former Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia—and retained by two other Democrats—the late L. Mendel Rivers of South Carolina and now Hebert.

A Phi Beta Kappa, Blandford graduated cum laude from Hobart College before World War II, and earned a law degree from Yale after the war. He reached the rank of major in his war-time service in the Marine Corps.

The chief counsel is not well liked, even by the members who are counted as his allies. They describe him as "abrasive" and "short-fused," but they excuse his manner because of the pressures of his job.

There are 41 members of the committee, all of them occasionally requiring the services of the professional staff. Blandford is required to have at his fingertips an almost inconceivable amount of data on defense operations, weapons systems, costs, analyses, manpower needs, and intelligence agencies of the nearly $80 billion a year defense department.

His diligence and industriousness are unquestioned. He normally is at his desk by 6 or 6:30 a.m., and reportedly once told a member who asked him for some information to "be at my office at 7 a.m. tomorrow."

Long lunch hours are a tradition, but even those are at least semi-business since they are almost invariably with representatives of a defense industry or a military service.

Blandford makes $36,000 a year, which is as much as the committee is allowed by law to pay him. The members make $42,500.

Apparently most of his socializing is done with personnel from the Pentagon or the defense industries. They normally make up his foursomes at the exclusive Burning Tree Golf Club, and with a few members of Congress and an occasional newsmen, comprise the guest lists for the infrequent cocktail parties or dinners at his suburban home.

Blandford does not confine himself to "promoting the weapons systems initiated by the Defense Department—he has been known to initiate programs of his own.

The so-called freedom fighter airplane, for instance, is an item the Congress authorized without a Pentagon request. It is still in the works, and is intended to compete with the French Mirage for use in underdeveloped countries of Latin America and elsewhere.

At the Pentagon, they call it "Russ Glandford's Plane," and Aerospace News has used that name for it.

He also is believed to have initiated a recent attempt by the committee to lend three submarines to China without a Defense Department request, and to have been at least one of the authors of a congressional move to modernize and expand the U.S. Navy at a far faster rate than the Pentagon proposed.

During the ship loan hearings last year, the printed (and censored) hearings of the committee show the following exchange:

The Chairman (Rivers): "Why shouldn't we have an amendment, Mr. Blandford, to put in—how many submarines?"

Mr. Blandford: "I would recommend three submarines, Mr. Chairman... the reason I suggested three, Mr. Chairman, is that it seems to me from a practical viewpoint that if the Chinese Nationalists are going to have to train submarine personnel, that rather than go piecemeal, one at a time, it would be better to give them three now so they can train people to handle three submarines."

The chairman and the full committee accepted his judgment and the House of Representatives approved the requested submarines without demur. They were deleted from the bill in the Senate.

There is some feeling that Blandford may be on the way out despite Hebert's decision. The people who believe this cite the fact that Blandford not only is now eligible for two pensions from the Marine Corps and from Congress, but that he would undoubtedly be able to get a good job with a defense industry if he desired it.

Blandford, moreover, was seriously ill last year with a bout of kidney stones, and was away from the committee for several months. He reports that he is now fully recovered, but other committee sources said indefinitely.

Past Record Speaks for Itself

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My wife's sister (I'll call her Myrtle) married a bum who has been AWOL from the service several times. Myrtle spent time, on two different occasions, in a mental hospital, and this last time when she came out, she decided to go back to her no-good husband.

My wife and her whole family tried to talk Myrtle out of it, because this guy will have Myrtle back in the mental hospital in no time. He runs around with other women. (He is a regular sex maniac.)

Myrtle won't listen to anybody. Here is where I come into it: When my wife was trying to tell Myrtle what a louse her husband was, Myrtle said that I was no better than I had made several passes at HER. This is a dirty, rotten lie. Myrtle is ugly as a bullfrog, and I wouldn't spit on her if she was on fire.

My wife believes her sister. How can I prove to my wife that Myrtle is lying?

TRUE BLUE

DEAR TRUE: You can't. It's your word against Myrtle's. It seems to me that your past record (and Myrtle's) should speak for both of you.

CLUB ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED — The Couples Club of Fair Street Reformed Church celebrated its 25th anniversary Saturday, Mar. 27. Children's Theater Well Received

The Saugerties High School Auditorium was the scene of this year's Children's Theater presentation. Sponsored as a community service by the Woman's Club of Saugerties, the Herrick Marionettes gave a charming performance of the fairy tale "Rumpelstiltskin." The children in attendance were in rapt attention as the well-known puppeteers made the story's characters come once again to their happy ending.

Following the performance the children were treated to a first-hand glimpse of how the marionettes work, and some of the special effects were explained by Mr. and Mrs. Herrick.

Special awards were presented to eight children: a game of checkers from Millers Old and New, won by Denise Venett; and Easter basket from Newberry's, Gina Watson; a $5 gift certificate from Montano's Shoe Store for Carol Smith; a Thingmaker set from Sear's, Kim Colclough; from Grant's a Crazy Car for Yvonne Marie Serravallo; a red scooter from Caldor's, Pamela Garrison; a Montgomery Ward tape recorder for Mickey Myshrali; and an AM-FM clock radio from Big Scot was won by Bethany Irvin.

Music and Literature Department chairman, Mrs. Richard Dunn, was in charge of the Children's Theater project, with Mrs. Edward Rusczyk serving as ticket chairman, and Mrs. Albert Curl as awards chairman. Other members of the Music and Literature Department served as ushers: Mrs. Stephen Ryan, Mrs. Dennis Wurzel, Mrs. Stephen Dodig, and Mrs. Jerome Milosek.

Caribbean, African Dance Class Series

Those who missed the first series of Caribbean and African dance classes given by Beverly Oxley which ended Tuesday, Mar. 30, may be happy to learn that a new series will begin Tuesday, Apr. 6, at Christ's Lutheran Church Fellowship Hall, Woodstock. This series of eight classes will run through May 25. Classes are from 7 to 8:30 p.m. each Tuesday.

Mrs. Oxley who emphasizes that men as well as women are welcome, explains "so many of the dances are traditionally danced by men in tribal societies that much of the movement is particularly suitable for them." Those wishing to know more about the class may audit the first session and are advised to wear comfortable, non-restricting clothing.

Beverly Oxley, formerly a dancer with the Pearl Primus and Percival Borde Companies in New York, Washington, D.C., and on NRC-TV, is production assistant in drama at Bard College. Mrs. Oxley lived in Africa for two years, and has performed with "Le Ballet Camerounais" in France, Belgium and Germany, and with "Brasiliana" in Hungary, Switzerland, Spain, Morocco and on BBC-TV, London.

The Afro-Carib dance classes are sponsored by Performing Arts of Woodstock, and a special rate is available to members of PAW. The Lutheran Church Fellowship Hall is a few doors up the hill from Deanie's Restaurant.

Alcindor and Reed—Closer to Showdown

By United Press International
 Atlanta, 113-107 for a 3-1 Eastern Division playoff margin over the Hawks. Chamberlain's chances for appearing in possibly his last National Basketball Association playoff were hurt when the Chicago Bulls stopped Los Angeles 112-102 to even that Western Conference series at 2-2. Baltimore gained a superior 3-1 edge over Philadelphia on a 120-105 decision. The NBA's Most Valuable Player, has conquered every opposing pivotman in the league this season with the exception of Reed, who seems to psych out the Milwaukee 7-foot-2 giant at each meeting. New York beat the Bucks four regular season, almost a third of Milwaukee's total of 16 losses. As usual, Alcindor had no trouble handling Nate Thurmond as Milwaukee beat San Francisco for the 12th straight time over two seasons. Big Lew turned the pivot into a gattling gun as he hooked, popped and dunked to mow down the Warriors. Bob Dandridge contributed 23 points to the Buck attack. Jerry Lucas led San Francisco with 25 points and Thurmond added 23. Reed and Dick Barnett combined for eight straight points in a two-minute span while the league's best defensive team held Atlanta scoreless. New York's 108-100 lead with two minutes to play was safe as a jittery Atlanta team began throwing the ball away. Walt Frazier, who scored 29 points in each of his two previous playoff games with the Hawks, led New York on 26 points and Barnett had 22. Lou Hudson, the NBA's fifth leading scorer, topped the Hawks with 30 points.

Chance, Lonborg Move Out

By United Press International
 Dean Chance and Jim Lonborg, a pair of Cy Young Award winners, are suffering the price of fleeting fame.

Chance, at least, had another chance today as he became the newest addition to the Detroit Tiger mound staff after he was traded by the New York Mets to the American League club. Lonborg was optioned to Louisville of the International League when Boston finally gave up on him following his award winning year in 1967

McDaniels Sparks Feud

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Relations between the Utah Stars and Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association were at the boiling point today after the Cougars signed the Stars' No. 1 draft choice, All-American 7-footer Jim McDaniels of Western Kentucky.

"Jim McDaniels will not play for anybody other than the Utah Stars," declared an angered Vince Boryla, the Stars' general manager.

"We played by the rules," he said. "We want McDaniels and will do whatever necessary to get him."

Boryla, visibly shaken, told sportswriters' luncheon Tuesday that McDaniels had jumped to Carolina. A few minutes later, in Greensboro, N.C., it was announced that McDaniels had signed a multi-year contract with the Cougars. No terms were announced.

Boryla, who traded Donnie Freeman and Wayne Hightower to Texas for Ron Boone and Glenn Combs, plus the draft rights to McDaniels, said it was a personal services contract.

"He can do anything for Carolina," Boryla said, slamming his hand on a table. "but he will not play basketball for them."

McDaniels averaged 27.8 points and 10.5 rebounds a game and led Western Kentucky to third place in the NCAA playoffs. He was drafted by Seattle of the National Basketball Association in the second round.

Carolina's No. 1 choice had been another 7-footer, Elmore Smith of Kentucky State.

Other ABA owners had urged him to let Carolina have McDaniels for the good of the league, Boryla said, "but the other owners don't care about us."

Porter Is Investigated

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association says it is investigating reports that Villanova University's basketball star Howard Porter jumped the eligibility gun.

Warren Brown, executive director of the NCAA's rules enforcement program, said Tuesday his group is following the latest allegations that Porter has been under professional contract since late last year.

If the NCAA confirms reports that Porter signed with the Pittsburgh Condors of the American Basketball Association's, the verdict could strike Villanova's recent successful season from official memory.

Fans would have to forget that the Wildcats, led by the 6-foot-8 Porter, came close to denying UCLA its fifth straight NCAA title.

Villanova lost to the Bruins 68-62 in the NCAA final last Saturday.

On Monday the Condors announced they had acquired a contract on Porter from the ABA, but they would not say when it had been signed. This revived the report of last January that the Villanova star, who played high school ball in Pittsburgh, had inked a $350,000 pact.

According to an NCAA spokesman, on Feb. 4, 1971 Porter signed an affidavit under oath that he had not entered into any agreement with a professional organization or agent.

If, as reported, Porter committed himself on Dec. 16, 1970, and continued competing as a collegian, the deed would invalidate his and Villanova's 1970-71 season.

Porter said he hasn't signed anything with anybody.

OCS-Coleman Faculty Return

BOICEVILLE

The faculties of Ontario and John Coleman High Schools will face each other in a rematch of a basketball game played earlier this season as the two teams take to the court at OCS Friday, April 2, for the benefit of the Indians' Booster Club.

Game time is set at 7:30 p.m. The two teams played this past February for the benefit of the Ken Brooker Fund. Coleman won that confrontation.

Texas, Rockets Are Tied: May Have Playoff for 4th

By United Press International
 The American Basketball Association may need a playoff to determine a playoff participant.

That could be the situation if the Denver Rockets and the Texas Chaps both win or both lose tonight in the ABA's regular season windup. The teams are tied for fourth in the West with 29-24 records and dual victories or losses would necessitate a Thursday night playoff.

The teams remained tied Tuesday night as Denver beat Virginia 129-119 and Texas stopped Memphis 99-86. Denver plays host to New York tonight while Texas is at Indiana.

In other ABA action, Pittsburgh ripped Kentucky 149-132, Carolina edged Indiana 114-112, and Utah beat New York 115-97.

Ron Boone and Willie Wise teamed for 45 points to lead Utah over the Nets, who got a 28-point effort from Rick Barry.

Can Trout Make It April Fool?

KINGSTON April 1 is more than April Fool's Day. It marks the opening of the trout season in New York State and weather conditions notwithstanding, thousands of anglers will be out in huge numbers for opening day.

Stream conditions are always of particular interest to early season fishermen, even though changing weather can abruptly alter them.

Temperatures around 30 and clear, slightly swollen streams await Ulster County anglers.

Latest word from the Department of Conservation is that opening day conditions should range from limited opportunity to quite good. Generally good hold-over of trout through the winter was reported.

Deep snow conditions in some parts of the Catskills will affect catches, but the lowland counties offer quite favorable conditions in Region 8 which includes the counties of Ulster, Westchester, Dutchess, Orange, Putnam, Rockland and Sullivan.

Cold weather has kept the Esopus Creek rainbow from peaking before opening day and conditions should be good there. In other years, mild weather has prompted an early run which ended before the season opened.

Ulster County's favorite fishing spots are again expected to attract their share of anxious anglers. Some of these include the Dividing Weir, Chimney Hole, The Portal, the Esopus and Sawkill. At the moment all these streams are looking good.

The Beaverkill and Willowemoc, which attract fishermen from around the world, are geared for heavy onslaughts. In Greene County and Schoharie, stream conditions are about the same as those in Ulster. This is especially true at Windham, Jewett and East Jewett.

The Phoenicia and Chichester streams will be among the most popular areas and any part of the Esopus from the reservoir up to old Herdman Bridge is expected to produce some good rainbow catches.

Opening day lures are expected to include the whole gamut of worms, live bait, spinners, wet flies, streamers and some highly individual choices, fishermen being that individualistic.

The streams from Lexington up through to Margaretville and the lower end of the Pepacton are reported in good condition, but no big catches are expected at the Ashokan Reservoir until there is a warmer runoff.

In the northern part of the state, lakes and ponds are mostly ice bound yet and even some streams will be difficult to fish due to deep snows along their banks. Anglers should remember that except where specifically permitted, trout may not be taken through the ice.

A special fishing area of 1.8 miles of the Willowemoc will permit artificial lures and flies, exclusively.

Reports of stocking of trout have been sketchy and incomplete, unfortunately. Anglers taking tagged fish are asked to cooperate with the Conservation Department by reporting details of their catch, including location, species, size, weight and tag number. This information is invaluable in determining growth rate and other factors on future stocking plans.

Trout may be taken in New York State from April 1 to Sept. 30, any size. The daily creel limit is 10, except in Ashokan reservoir where the limit is three.

KBT Resumes Play

First round play in the Kingston Basketball Tournament continues Thursday in Municipal Auditorium with two games.

In the 7:30 p.m. opener, the Oreos, alias the IBM All-Stars, meet DeMico Motors followed by an 8:30 p.m. clash between Pelicelo Pipers, the Poughkeepsie City League champs, and Rosendale All-Stars.

Sickler's Delivery and the Roadrunners advanced to Saturday night's semi-finals with wins over the weekend. They lie in wait for the outcome of Thursday's games.

The Oreos will be coached by Rich Tavares and should prove to be a strong entry what with 6-8 John Gardner, who played college ball at Florida A & M, Rich Dryer, a former star at St. Peter's, and Rich Whitney, who wore a University of Connecticut uniform for two years, available.

Gardner was instrumental in getting Newburgh Free Academy's Larry Frazier, Wade Pittman, and Jim Rogers to go to his alma mater.

DeMico Motors lists Saugerties Athletic Association

highlighters Gene Bruno, Ron Thomas, and Jerry Hawkins in its lineup. Howard Bernard will coach the team.

Council Votes Yes

CITY HALL (UPI)—The City Council voted Tuesday its approval of a plan to buy and refurbish Yankee Stadium at a cost of $24 million.

The vote was 29 to six with two abstentions. The measure now must be acted on by the state legislature which must also authorize the city to borrow outside its legal debt limit to finance the transaction.

Most of the six negative votes were cast by council members who objected to the fact that the New York football Giants, would not commit himself to keep his team in New York even if the city buys and refurbishes the stadium.

Michael Burke, president of the New York Yankees, promised last week that the Yankees would stay in New York for 30 years if the city goes through with its plans, but Mapa said he wanted to keep his options open for a possible move to the Hackensack Meadows where New Jersey is considering building a sports stadium complex.

Council rules forbid applause by council members during debate, but a good number of the members forgot this rule temporarily today in a rare instance when they applauded Democratic Councilman Bertram Gelfand of the Bronx.

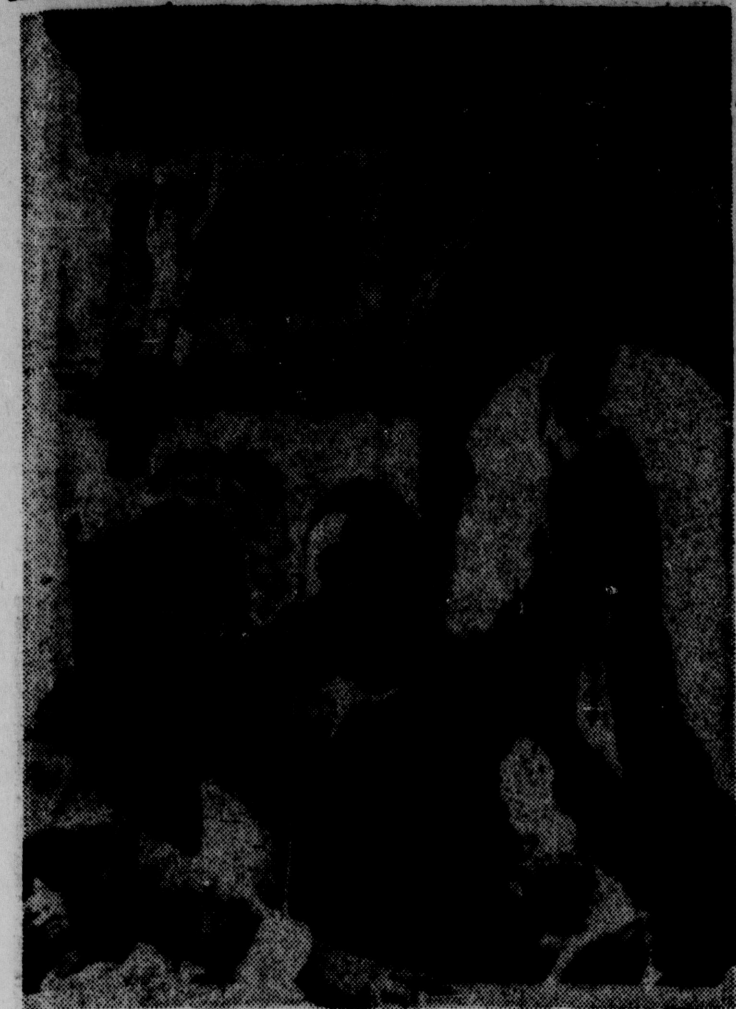

Gelfand drew the hand with his statement that Mara "can take his team out right now to the Hackensack Meadows and see how he likes it."

Another Bronx Democrat, Mario Merola, said that if Mara pulls the football Giants out of Yankee Stadium "there would be a line at City Hall of other teams waiting to take the Giants place."

Merola, Gelfand and others said that leasing the stadium to the Yankees under a long-term lease similar to the lease the city has with the Mets for Shea Stadium, would mean a $300,000 annual loss.

But they said the loss would be made up by income taxes, subway fares and the bolstering of real estate values in the Yankee Stadium neighborhood.

TRIUMPHANT ARRIVAL — Brazilian soccer star Pele waves the Jules Rimet Cup and makes victory sign from an open car as he comes down the Champs Elysees in Paris among huge crowd of soccer fans Tuesday. In background is the Arc de Triomphe. The cup is symbolic of world football dominance which Pele's Brazilian team won for third time in 1970. He is in Paris for exhibition game. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

Immanuels Topple Unbeaten Port Ewen

KINGSTON Immanuel upset previously undefeated Port Ewen, 56-55, to advance to Saturday's Senior Church Basketball League playoff finals in the YMCA gym.

St. George, easy 77-43 conquerors of Redeemer, will be the other team in the championship contest.

Port Ewen had won nine in a row going into the game with Immanuel, but the Port didn't count on the kind of performance turned in by Bruce Stalter of the winners.

Led by Stalter, who was to score 28 points, Immanuel came back from a 28-23 first half deficit to go in front 46-40 after three quarters.

The losers made a valiant try to pull the game back to their side in the fourth period, but it fell just short.

St. George had four men in double figures in crushing Redeemer. The game was tight for the first half before the winners poured it on after intermission.

Charlie Yankoglu paced St. George with 21 points. George Gennuleas and Dave Larios had 16 apiece followed by Jim Corsones with 15.

Mike Anderson scored 13 for Redeemer.

The box scores: Port Ewen (55) — Jim Wenzel, 15; Joe Wenzel, 13; Lucas, 2; Atkins, 2; Harris, 18; Ryerson, 5.

Immanuel (56) — Witkowski, 8; Saul Schleede, 12; M. Schleede; Fatum, 8; Wolff; Stalter, 28.

St. George (77) — L. Geanuleas, 2; G. Geanuleas, 16; Larios, 16; Corsones, 15; Yankoglu, 21; Littlefield, 7; Redeemer (43) — Anderson, 13; Rossi, 12; Lowe, 5; Schline, 7; Anderson, 4; Fox, 3; Lenza, 2; Rugger, 2; Rion, 5.

City Slow Pitch League Sets Meeting on Sunday

KINGSTON It's that time again! Baseball or softball, take your pick. Specifically on the subject of softball, Andy Murphy III, the Superintendent of Recreation, has called the first meeting of the Recreation Commission's Slow Pitch Softball League. It will take place Sunday, April 4, at 3 p.m. in the municipal auditorium.

Superintendent Murphy urges all interested teams to be represented.

The league was the largest in local history with 32 teams competing in the 1970 season.

"This will be a really big one," says Murphy. "We expect more than the 32 teams of last season and could hit the 40 mark. We'll know better after Sunday."

There is no fast pitch softball league in the city, but the slow pitch variety caught on fast in 1970. It attracted players through a wide age range and was extremely popular with the players.

"We just don't have the players for a fast-pitch circuit," Murphy added. "We have to gear our plans to what the players want and the slow pitch league is it."

Janes Bids for No. 1 Spot at Dartmouth

HANOVER, N. H. — Former Kingston High School pitching ace, Charlie Janes of Hurley, could be the No. 1 hurler for Dartmouth College's Eastern Intermediate baseball champions this season.

That's the latest evaluation of Coach Tony Lupien of the Big Green. Lupien, who played major league ball with the Boston Red Sox, Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago White Sox, has been impressed by Janes' superb showing on Dartmouth's current southern tour.

Janes, a junior who was 5-2 in his sophomore season, defeated Old Dominion, 11-2, in his first spring start, then blanked East Carolina University, 11-0, on a five-hitter for his first Dartmouth shutout. It marked only the second time that the Big Green has been able to beat East Carolina at Greenville, N.C.

When the spring tour started, Janes was rated No. 2 on the Dartmouth staff behind another junior, Pete Broberg, who was 6-2 least season. But things have changed.

"Coach Lupien thinks Janes can move past Broberg to the top of the staff," reported Jack DeGrange, the Dartmouth Sports Information Director.

"That would be quite a trick, since Broberg was expected to be all by himself in the No. 1 spot."

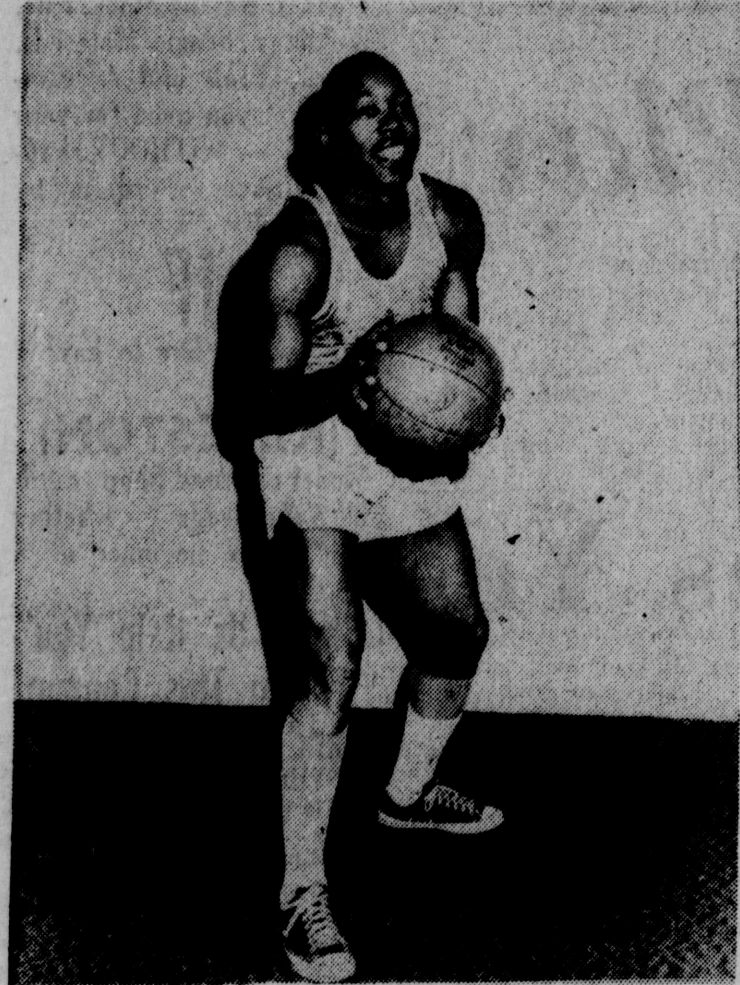

Broberg, incidentally, who comes from Palm Beach, Fla., was offered $175,000 by Charlie Finely in 1968, at the same time Janes was drafted by the Phillies.

Coach Lupien has 13 lettermen back with the Big Green. Dartmouth had a fantastic season in 1970, winning 21 straight games enroute to the Eastern League title. It also captured the NCAA District One championship and placed fifth in the College World Series at Omaha, Nebraska.

DARTMOUTH'S NO. 1 PITCHER, perhaps, but that's the word coming out of Hanover, N. H., about Charlie Janes, former Kingston High School pitching ace, who is unbeaten in the Big Green's current southern tour and is expected to draw the 1971 Eastern League starting assignment against Rutgers on Tuesday. Janes, a junior, was 5-2 during the 1970 season and also pitched with the famous Goldpanners in Alaska.

Corley was the Most Valuable Player in the Mid-Hudson Valley YMCA Invitational Tournament last season; 6-9 Wingo "Spinner" Hawthorne, a great semi-pro star and one of the leading rebounders in the country; 6-4 Tony Jackson, former St. John's University All-American; ABA star, 6-11 LeRoy Wright, College of Pacific, leading rebounder in the country and member of the United States Olympic team in 1960 with Jerry West and Oscar Robertson; 6-0 clown and backcourt ace LaLa Lawrence, formerly of Grambling.

The Wizards come into the game with an overall record of 450 wins and two defeats.

Advance tickets are on sale at Spada's Sporting Goods Store and Bud's Sub Shop. Tickets will also be on sale at the box office at the Field House the night of the game.

"I'll definitely play in the league and for the team that gives me the best offer, the most money."

The answer listed above, to the obvious question—(Which do you prefer to play in, the National Basketball Association or the American Basketball Association?)—could easily be attributed to any of the nation's young, college stars who have been drafted by both professional leagues.

Most of the nation's top collegiate players find themselves in the middle of a bidding war between the two leagues that rivals the old National Football League-American Football League dollar-confrontation. And, in some respects, surpasses it in terms of published figures, listed benefits, and the like.

One such star is Rich Rinaldi, St. Peter's College All-American, the nation's sixth-leading scorer.

Rinaldi hit 28.8 points-per-game for the season and was drafted by the Miami Floridians of the ABA in the fifth round of that draft. Monday, the sharpshooting, 6-5, guard-forward, was selected by the NBA's Baltimore Bullets in the third round of the draft, second pick for the Bullets.

The Poughkeepsie native and former star of Franklin Delano Roosevelt High School in the Central Section of the Dutchess County Scholastic League had KINGSTON St. Mary's of Kingston freshmen caught a glimpse of "City" ball here Sunday and came out on the wrong end of a 58-52 score against St. Cecilia of Manhattan.

Despite Duane Carey's 29 points for St. Mary's, St. Cecilia was able to overcome a first quarter deficit and eventually won the tight struggle in the late going.

St. Mary's had taken a 11-3 lead which St. Cecilia reversed to a 22-19 edge in their favor by halftime. The home team fought to within two after three periods only to see the winning visitors stretch the margin to the final six point spread at the final buzzer.

Charlie Fantuzzo led St. Cecilia with 17 points.

The box score: St. Cecilia (58) — De Jesus, 10; Rodriguez, 9; Fantuzzo, 17; Calderon, 12; Casanova, 7; Hill, Vasquez; Kemmerlin; Middleton; Washington, 3; Torres; Green.

St. Mary's (52) — Carey, 29; Timbrouck, 9; Costello, 2; Coughlin, 3; Mahoney, 7; Casciaro; Vertetis; Mercier; Raleigh; Mapes; McClosky, 2; Quigley.

UCCC Elects Zeeh New Tennis Captain

STONE RIDGE in 1968. He responded by going undefeated. As an encore, Bill entered and won the New York State Jaycee Tournament.

Then, teamed with his brother Pete, the name Zeeh rose to the top in the Ulster County doubles tournament. They won it twice, in 1969 and 1970.

Zeeh, who was named captain of the U-tri-C squad today, credits his brother Peter, Kingston High Coach John Hunter, playing partner Joe Scott, and local tennis enthusiast N. Jansen Fowler for helping him develop his ability.

"Bill is a hard worker," says Ulster Coach Ed Decker, "always striving to perfect his shots. He is a keen competitor, and a fine gentleman both on and off the courts. It's a pleasure to have a player of Bill's ability, on our initial college team."

The season opens Monday at Rockland County Community College.

referred to as the "Sport that Zeeh Built."

Zeeh is Bill Zeeh, one of the top net performers in the area, and it was as a result of his talents that tennis rose to the varsity level at UCCC.

Last year as a freshman, Zeeh was allowed to enter the Region XV tournament as Ulster's representative even though his school didn't have a team. Bill responded by winning five matches to enter the finals. He lost there, but was hampered by a leg cramp caused by trying to squeeze three days action into one which the weather forced tournament officials to do. His showing gained for him a berth on the Region All-Star roster.

The performance was no surprise to local tennis buffs, however.

Your Horoscope

Thursday, April 1

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Only by using your head and taking advantage of some beneficial surface conditions can you prevent some very difficult situations from occurring that could put you way behind the eight ball. However, a smile and a considerate attitude pleases others and brings you their active support and assistance where you need it the most.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Although you're dissatisfied with conditions at home, don't make any radical changes that could worsen matters. Get at the bottom of whatever may be the trouble and clear that up quietly. Relax tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to get all of your affairs streamlined vigorously, so get busy early and clear up all the duties ahead of you quickly. Know where you have been making errors and clear those up. Get out socially in p.m.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Although financial affairs require speed on your part to take care of them on time, make sure you do not act too quickly and in error. Be clever in handling property matters. Show that you are right on the ball.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Ideal day to do whatever will give you a more charming appearance and also help you to relax from daily tensions. A little compliment to others and a cheerful attitude helps much now. Show that you are not a petty person.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure that you follow advice which trusted advisors give you now and you come out on top. Show that you have good business sense and you overcome frustrations. Use your own good judgment, also.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Trying to force friends who are doing other things to change and go along with your ideas is a waste of time; paddle your own canoe and all is fine. Some personal wish can be achieved by changing your methods, or attitude, or both.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have several career problems that are bothering you, but you can handle them nicely if you get advice from an expert you know. Seek this person out early and you make this a profitable day, p.m.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to dive right into those projects that fascinate you, but it would be well to study them further for best results. Steer clear of a most charming person who nonetheless gets on your nerves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handling responsibilities that cannot be postponed occupies the better part of day before you can get into new projects that fascinate you. Try to please mate also in p.m.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Keep promises to associates and recognize their pet idiosyncrasies. Don't do anything that will irk an ally or there can be a severance of valuable connections. Evening good for reading something worthwhile.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Getting all that backlog of work handled early frees time for new activities of importance just about to begin. Don't argue with a fellow associate who does not see eye to eye with you. Tend to your own knitting exclusively.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Being firm with yourself and not wasting too much time on pleasure, or money, makes this a constructive and profitable day. Have a plan of life in mind that is more worthwhile. Show you are an able worker.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she when young will be one of those hypersensitive young people who is constantly fussing about something or other and is so self-absorbed that it is important for you to get this child in group activities where sportsmanship can soon be learned. Give the right spiritual training to acquire poise, assurance, and teach to do chores around the home that give a sense of responsibility. Give attention to the diet early. Strong aspects for the artist and musician.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

HE TALKED FIRST: (Q) I told my best friend about this girl I liked and was thinking about dating. I introduced him to her. He liked her, too, and gave her a ring. That was six months ago. They have been going steady ever since.

I still have a crush on her. One of her friends told me that she might go with me if she broke up with him. Should I tell her I like her?—Loser in California.

(A) You talked about your game plan instead of following it. As a result you lost the game.

Too many people go through life talking about what they are going to do. They give other people ideas and then those people take action and take over. Next time take action first, talk later.

About this particular girl—you should have told her, not your friend, six months ago that you liked her. Now is too late.

LOUD MOTHER: (Q) My mother yells. She jumps all over me all the time about all the little mistakes I make. If my father is talking to me about something I should or shouldn't do, she jumps in and starts giving advice of her own.

She never minds her own business.—Tired Ears in Maine.

(A) Look at it this way. Your mother thinks you are her business. This may be uncomfortable for you sometimes. But you would be much more uncomfortable if she didn't.

If she seems cross at times, it may be because she has had a bad day. Mothers have bad days just like everybody else. Try to understand.

A Connecticut reader writes in part: "I wonder what the world's record for chucking a contract is. Just the other day my partner was playing three no-trump. West opened the 10 of hearts and in one-tenth of a second my partner had covered with dummy's jack. It took him five minutes to play the rest of the hand but the contract was out the window as soon as he got his grimy hand on that jack of hearts."

We really sympathize with our correspondent. If South had taken time out to think at trick one he would have seen that his correct play was to play a low heart from dummy. South could be sure of nine tricks if West held the queen of hearts. He would also be sure of nine tricks against the actual distribution provided he played low from both hands. He would still be in trouble if that 10 of hearts had been a singleton but then there would be no way to bring the contract home. Incidentally, the defense must have played very carefully while South was trying to work out of the hole he had put himself in.

We can't give South any laurel wreaths for his bidding either. He might well have tried a two-heart call at his second turn to bid instead of leaping into no-trump. North would have raised hearts and we might doubt if South could have found a way to go down at four hearts. In fact, we believe that he might well have come up with an overtrick if he just played his two top trumps as a starter.

A—Franklin D. Roosevelt, in 1932.

Q—What is the chief reason for the "big tree" or giant sequoia's survival through the ages?

A—The bark is one to two feet thick and, as it lacks resin, it is practically fireproof.

Paltz Mystery... Three Tipped Bulldozers

By WADE BURKHART

NEW PALTZ
When the New Paltz Communications Center called New Paltz Town Supervisor Anthony J. Moriello at 7 a.m. Sunday morning he thought it must be somebody's idea of a joke. The center told him a town resident, while dumping his refuse at the town landfill, noticed that the town's bulldozer, a Caterpillar D-6, was tipped over.

Moriello immediately went to investigate, and found that the "joke" was a lot less funny than he thought.
Not only was the town's D-6 tipped over, but the town's Case dozer, and the Caterpillar Trax-cavator of the contractor building the new town garage at the landfill were also on their sides, in varying states of disrepair.

Somebody, characterized as "demented" by Moriello, but obviously sane enough to know how to operate a bulldozer, had used the contractor's big bulldozer to push the other three machines over, breaking tracks and generally raising havoc in the process. Moriello said he then apparently aimed the big dozer up an embankment, in the hope it would flip itself over.

The big dozer hung up on some trees and shrubbery and stalled out before it could tip over.

Moriello contacted all concerned parties, including H.O. Penn Machinery of Poughkeepsie, which handles Caterpillar repairs in the area, and the Case Company. The machinery was left in place for the insurance adjuster to look at Monday, but men from Case and H.O. Penn were working on the problem Tuesday.

There was no damage estimate available, but Moriello observed "you don't repair a bulldozer for 10 cents." The damage should certainly run into the thousands.

According to Moriello, New Paltz Highway Superintendent David Decker felt the Case dozer could be put back into service by the weekend. The D-6 is another matter, and will probably have to be taken to H.O. Penn's shop for extensive repairs. Penn hoped to get it in the shop by Thursday, according to Moriello.

The contractor was able to get his big dozer, the one which hung up, back in working order Sunday.
Moriello said the town's insurance would probably cover the repair costs, but said "no insurance pays for time and aggravation."

Both town police and state police from the Highland barracks and the Kingston BCI investigated the incident, but Moriello knew of no leads.

Five Defendants Indicted On Drug Possession Charges

KINGSTON
Five men previously arrested by authorities on narcotics charges were named defendants in indictments reported out Tuesday to Justice Edward S. Conway in a final report of the March term of a Supreme Court Grand Jury.

The defendants included four Long Island residents taken into custody on Jan. 14, by Saugerties Village Police during a routine traffic check. Police reported they found 279 decks of heroin and a large bag of cultivated marijuana in the vehicle when searched.

Indicted on charges of criminal possession of a dangerous drug fourth degree in the Saurgeties case were Jeffery Noel Weiss, 22, of Seaford, Kenneth Everson, 21, and Bruce H. Williams, also 21, both of Hicksville, and Max Schwartz, 22, of Forest Hills.
Also indicted was Earl Francis Johnson, 48, who was arrested at the Kingston Hotel in Uptown Kingston during coordinated drugs raids by city police last Oct. 29. He was accused of having in his possession several decks of heroin and a quantity of the same drugs that had not been cut.

Johnson was indicted on charges of criminal possession of dangerous drugs fourth degree, two counts, and criminal possession of dangerous drugs in the sixth degree.

The grand jury also indicted John Charles Cole, 30, of 69 West Union Street on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated, a felony. He was arrested by Kingston Police on Nov. 26, after the car he was driving allegedly hit and damaged two parked vehicles on Hasbrouck Avenue.

Robert L. Riggins, 19, of Morton Boulevard, was accused in an indictment of burglary in the third degree and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Police arrested him on Feb. 5 and accused him of entering the Kingston Buick garage at 10 Main Street and taking a 1968 car.

Others indicted were, David M. Brown, Raymond B. Hanaburgh and Edwin Santiago, charged with burglary in the third degree and petit larceny resulting from a break-in at Walkkill on Dec. 16; Arthur Arnold on charges of burglary third degree and grand larceny third degree stemming from a break-in in the Town of Marbletown on Dec. 30, and James Boyle, charged with criminal possession of a dangerous drug fourth degree. He was arrested Nov. 21 by Saurgeties Police during an investigation.

A not found bill or dismissal was returned in the case of Gary Michael Naccarato, 18, of Tillson, who had been charged with criminally selling a hallucinogenic drug in the fourth degree, two counts. He had been picked up during the Oct. 29 police raids in the city. Dismissals also were reported in the cases of Lawrence Poirer and Raymond Banas, who had been charged with assault in the first and second degree following an incident in the Town of Wawarsing, and also in the case of Caesar Mercado, who had been accused of rape in the third degree.

One sealed indictment was reported out by the Grand Jury and on motion of First Assistant District Attorney Joseph Traficant, Justice Conway issued a bench warrant.
On Traficant's motion, Justice Conway transferred all indictments to County Court for disposition.

Codification Going Well in Ellenville

ELLENVILLE
Codification of the Village of Ellenville's ordinances and laws is going "very well" according to village Manager Lawrence E. Eyres.

An 11-hour meeting was held Monday with Hal Shankas of the Municipal Code Corp., the company performing the codification. Present at the meeting were Eyres, Village Clerk Lillian Finkelstein, Village Attorney James Murray, Building Inspector Howard Weiss, Village Engineer Aaron Horowitz, Police Chief William C. Tappell, and Mayor Robert Dowling. Horowitz, Tappell, and Dowling were there for a portion of the marathon session.
Also present at the meeting was the Democratic designee for the position of village attorney to replace Murray. His name has not been revealed.

The purpose of the codification is to eliminate obsolete ordinances and to update current ordinances, according to Eyres. As an example of an obsolete ordinance he felt the village could easily get along without, Eyres cited the ordinance which specified the maximum speed at which one could ride a horse through the village.

Just over $5,000 has been budgeted for the service for the current fiscal year.
The Municipal Code Corp. will now place the results of Monday's conference in written form, and return them to the Village Board of Trustees. The board will then schedule a public hearing on the new code.

Eyres hoped it could be scheduled as early as May. Then the code would be returned to the company with the board's revisions for final printing.

The codification will clarify many areas of the village code, including the housing, building, and fire prevention codes. Eyres said. The new code will also include new ordinances to "cover matters that the overwhelming majority of other communities have covered," Eyres said.

Included in the area of new ordinances is a familiar old face. The new code, as proposed, will contain a swimming pool ordinance, a measure that has been defeated on numerous occasions in the village. Eyres was asked by the Freeman if he felt this ordinance would be defeated too, and he said he felt this particular ordinance, a simplified one, might be acceptable to Ellenville residents because it contained a "grandfather clause" which "will in a great way protect present pool owners."

Codification will have great benefit to Ellenville, according to Eyres. It will simplify and condense ordinances so that they can be readily understood by all, and they will be filed in one central book so they can be readily located, he said. He was certain this will "bring about a smoother operation of government."
